MILTON WOMAN GETS 'MESSAGES' FROM PROF. JAMES

HEARD DEAD TALK, SAYS AUTHOR

Mrs. Burke Writes 100-Page Book From Dictation of Late Harvard Savant

By HAZEL CANNING.

"I—William James—late professor of psychology at Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., U. S. A., am sending you this message. While I was on earth—alive, as you call it—I thought that I knew a lot. Now I know that I knew nothing." — Professor William James to Mrs. Jane Revere Burke of Milton.

Professor William James has at last got a message across from the world where now his spirit resides to the world of his late bodily life.

This message has come through Mrs. Jane Revere Burke of Adams street, Milton. Mrs. Burke is a gentlewoman, of the stock of oldest Boston. She is a mother, an ardent church woman, a simple home woman, withal.

Yet over a year ago, Professor James, as she tells the story, first came to her. And she yielded herself to be the instrument to get his message through to earth. And wrote that message—over a hundred pages—at his dictation.

Mrs. Burke tells of how Professor James first spoke to her. Also of how she came to write his message—in a little book, privately printed—the title being "The One Way." As the lady explains, in her gentle, measured tones:

NEVER KNEW SAVANT.

"I have never written a book in my life. Until Professor James spoke to

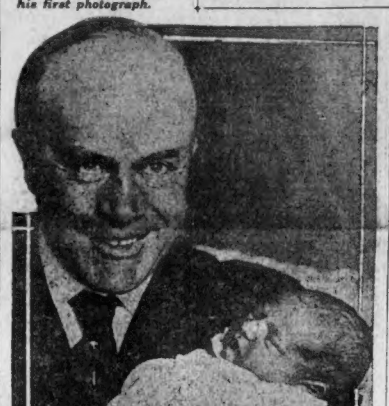
David McClure Peters Has Picture Taken

Boston's mayor and sixth son, who celebrated his fifth day by posing for his first photograph.



Notice the glad smile of paternal satisfaction.

This is Mayor Peters and the five-day-old addition to the Peters household.

His Honor posed for the Boston American today for the first time, holding the future Mayor or Governor, or perhaps President, in his arms.

Mrs. Peters was the first to announce the baby's name.

It is David McClure Peters.

"We named him after his great-great-grandfather, David McClure, who was my father's mother's father and a missionary among the Indians during most of his life," said the Mayor.

Not a whimper out of him while he posed for the first time in his life.

Once or twice the chubby fists came up and rubbed the little sleepy eyes and occasionally a smile flashed out as he nestled in daddy's arms.

Mrs. Peters is doing finely, thank you, and will be able to be up and around in a few days. Rose-filled cases scent her room at the Phillips building of the Massachusetts General Hospital, and daily she receives visits from the Mayor and their five other sons.

Although it had been hoped the baby would be a girl, Mayor Peters remarks, "I'm satisfied."

THIEVES BEAT DOCTOR AND FIRE HIS HOME

HOSPITAL BURNED BY BANDITS

Attack Upon Maine Physician Believed to Have Been Work of Drug Thieves

Lewiston, Me., June 13.—Dr. C. K. Donnell, proprietor of a private hospital at Thorne's Corner and manufacturer of widely known Indian remedies, was beaten into unconsciousness and his buildings fired by men believed to be drug thieves.

The physician was found in the doorway of his nursing laboratory, the flames from which aroused the neighborhood.

Owing to delay in the arrival of the fire department, the laboratory collapsed, and a safe containing 100 pounds of dynamite dropped from the second floor to the basement without exploding.

The Donnell hospital and laboratory are about two miles outside this city, sitting back from the road on their own grounds. In the laboratory was stored a quantity of drugs, used in the manufacture of the remedies, which were sold throughout the country.

According to the physician, he recovered consciousness shortly after being found, he had been robbed of drugs valued at $2500 during the past four weeks. Therefore, when he heard an automobile drive into his yards and stop, he at once got up and went outside.

LOWELL MAN HELD FOR THEFT OF AUTOS

John L. Collins of Astor street, Lowell, was arraigned in the Municipal Court today, charged with the larceny of two automobiles. He was remanded to the Charles street jail. The cars, it is alleged, were stolen from parking places in the Back Bay and were disposed of after the registration plates had been changed and an attempt made to cut out the makers' numbers. The machines are owned by Miss Dorothy C. Ramsey of Beacon street, Newton Centre, and Miss Doris S. Seeare of Mattvale road, Newton Centre.

INJURED CYCLIST FOUND IN FIELD

His skull fractured and his body covered with bruises and cuts, Charles W. Leetin, No. 4 Martin street, Hyde Park, was found today on the thick grass of a vacant lot near No. 1387 Washington street, Hyde Park. Beside him was his damaged bicycle.

The man was rushed to the Forest Hills Hospital where it was found that he was also suffering from internal injuries, and was in a critical condition.

The police began an investigation. They are working on the theory that he was struck by an automobile.

HENRY C. IDE DIES IN VERMONT

Was Governor, Envoy to Spain and Governor-General of Philippines

St. Johnsbury, Vt., June 13.—Henry C. Ide, former Governor of Vermont, died at his home here today after a short illness.

He had spent the Winter in California, where he had gone in an effort to regain his health, which had been poor for some years.

Governor Ide was born in Barnet, Vt., September 18, 1844, and was a graduate of Dartmouth College, 1866. Tufts College Law School conferred the degree of LL.D. upon him in 1900.

His first public post was that of State's attorney, 1876-8, after which he was elected to the Vermont state senate. In 1885 he was appointed United States Commissioner for Samoa and later Chief Justice of Samoa, under the combined British, German and American government there.

In 1900 he was named a member of the Taft Commission to establish civil government in the Philippines and governor-general of the islands in 1906.

President Taft named him as American envoy to Spain in 1909. He was the director of a number of banks and trust companies as well as the author of a number of books on legal and other matters.

His wife, who was Miss Mary M. Melcher of Stoughton, Mass., died April 13, 1892.

Weymouth Must Pay $15,000 for Cars

"Appropriate $15,000 for street car service or the cars will be discontinued," is the ultimatum given the town of Weymouth by officials of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company.

A report forwarded to the town officials states that last year's deficit on the Weymouth lines was nearly $30,000, half of which the town had to pay.

A special town meeting, the first under the new "limited town meeting" form of government, will be called to decide upon the question.

JUDGE REBUKES SACCO LAWYER

Attorney Moore Reprimanded From Bench for Attack on Mrs. Andrews

Judge Webster Thayer today rebuked Attorney Moore for remarks made as counsel for the defence of Bartolomeo Vanzetti and Nicola Sacco, on trial at Dedham, charged with murder.

Moore had characterized testimony of Mrs. Lola Andrews, a State witness, as "hopelessly confusing."

"That is an unfair criticism of any witness," said Judge Thayer with emphasis.

"There is a proper time and place for criticism of testimony. This is not the time."

Judge Thayer issued his reprimand after District Attorney Katzman had objected to remarks by counsel for the defence.

The trial of Sacco and Vanzetti, charged with the murders of Paymaster Frederick A. Parmenter and Guard Alessandro Berardelli, entered its third week today.

It was expected the State would complete its case by the middle of the week.

Cross-examination of Mrs. Andrews, a young Quincy nurse, who was interrupted by Sacco Saturday by yelling at her in court when she identified a jiu jitsu grip, swung Trask off his

TICKET-PUNCH FOILS BANDIT

Clinton, June 12.—A street car conductor's ticket-punch prevented a holdup near here today. Frank McDonald used it as a weapon on a man who threatened him with a revolver. McDonald was returning in his automobile from Leominster when the attempted holdup occurred. After striking the man on the knuckles, McDonald speeded up his car, and was pursued by the bandit in another car. Turning down the side road to Clinton, he avoided his pursuer by extinguishing the lights on his car.

DEFEATS UNRULY MALE

Mrs. Sugrue, First Policewoman, Uses Jiu Jitsu at Revere in Initial Arrest

The story of a struggle at Revere Beach between Mrs. Mary A. Sugrue, first woman appointed to the Metropolitan Park police, and George Trask of Uxbridge, in which the policewoman, making her first arrest, overpowered the man, handcuffed him and took him to the station, was told in Chelsea Court today.

The intrepid policewoman, undeterred by the man's struggles in his efforts to break away, subdued Trask by means of jiu jitsu and, before he fully realized what had happened, locked the handcuffs on his wrists.

The struggle took place a short distance from the boulevard at Revere Beach and was witnessed by a number of people, including Miss Elizabeth Goldthwaite, also of the Metropolitan department.

TRIED TO ESCAPE.

The two women had been following Trask for some time, in connection with the "clean-up" campaign inaugurated by the Metropolitan Park and Revere police departments.

Coming up with him, Mrs. Sugrue informed the man, who is fifty-two years old, that he was under arrest. Trask attempted to argue with the women, but a display of badges convinced him of the futility of this. He then started to run, but was seized by the plucky policewoman, who grasped him firmly by one arm.

The man tried to wrench his arm away and in his struggles to free himself dragged Mrs. Sugrue some distance.

Through it all she kept her hold and seizing an opportunity obtained a jiu jitsu grip, swung Trask off his

Jewelry and Trinkets Valued at $20,000 Stolen From New York Home

New York, June 13.—The home of Vincent Astor at No. 840 Fifth avenue was entered on the afternoon of June 4 by burglars, who made away with loot worth between $10,000 and $20,000, it became known today.

Jewelry and trinkets belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Astor and R. Peters, said to be a cousin of Mr. Astor, were taken. Entrance to the house was made by the servants' entrance.

MORE HOME BREW BUT "KICK" IS LESS

More home brew, but less kick! A total of 321 "samples" for analysis was received by Director Herman C. Lythgoe of the State Department of Food and Drugs last month, the highest number in any month since prohibition. The average alcoholic content was 22.44 per cent., the lowest in any month. The grand average for the year was 23.77 per cent. One sample was a boiled dinner. Home brew, police said, was dumped into the boiled dinner on the stove when they arrived.

EXAMINED IN BOSTON HOSPITAL

Prisoner, Seriously Ill, Brought to Boston for X-Ray Test

Charles Ponzi is seriously ill of stomach trouble.

He was brought from his cell in Plymouth jail to the Massachusetts General Hospital today for an X-ray examination.

Following the examination physicians stated they were not yet ready to announce the result of the examination. It was on the order of United States Marshal Keville and Sheriff Blake that Ponzi was taken to Boston.

"We want to determine the nature of his stomach ailment," Keville said. "He is not undergoing a surgical operation, but if it is necessary one will be performed."

He added that he had to make a report to Washington on the prisoner's condition.

Ponzi's wife has been informed of his illness. When the little foreign exchange promoter made his last appearance in Federal Court here his stomach was troubling him.

He declared he was unable to eat the ordinary prison fare and was allowed to go out to a restaurant to get food he could eat.

It was observed that he was thin and pale and had lost much of the cheery good nature that characterized him when he first got into the courts.

BURNED BODIES OF BABIES, IS CHARGE

Salem, June 13.—Statira V. Huribert, who conducts a hospital on Forester street, Salem, was fined $30 in the Salem court today on two charges of failing to report the death of two infants and of cremating their dead bodies. She appealed. She declared that she had the permission of both the father and mother for the cremation of the babies.

MAY LET SIMS' CASE DROP

Denby and Senate Not Likely to Go Further in View of "Disavowal"

Washington, June 13.—The reply of Rear Admiral Sims to Secretary of the Navy Denby constituting virtually a complete disavowal of the statements attributed to him in his London speeches, has made it practically certain that no severe punishment will be meted out to him when he returns to report in person to the Secretary of the Navy. It was said today in high naval quarters.

So far as the speeches themselves are concerned, the practicality closes the case, it was said today.

Admiral Sims will, however, be called upon to explain to the Secretary of the Navy why he delayed four days in offering the explanation which Secretary Denby had requested "without delay."

It is doubtful if anything further will be done regarding Admiral Sims' case until his return to Washington the last of next week. The resolution of inquiry into his utterances will be allowed to slumber in the Naval Affairs Committee in the Senate, and in all probability allowed to die a natural death.

Alleged Black Handers Held After Murder of Kidnaped New York Boy

By International News Service.

New York, June 13.—The greatest Black Hand round-up the police have undertaken in this city for many years was under way today as a result of the murder of five-year-old Giuseppe Varotta, whose body was found in the Hudson River after the parents had failed to pay $2,500 ransom.

Ten men are already under arrest and the police said they expected to make other arrests later in the day. The criminals who killed little Giuseppe because his parents were too poor to pay the ransom are believed by the police to be Sicilians.

According to the police, this is the first time on record that Black Hand kidnapers in New York have put a child to death for non-payment of ransom.

The Italian squad of the police department is under orders to run down every member of the gang, for the murder of the Varotta boy indicates that the Black Handers are becoming bolder in their efforts to extort money through crime.

Salvadore Varotta and his wife, the parents of the slain boy, are in a state of collapse. Little Giuseppe disappeared May 24. Physicians who examined the body said that life had been extinct about two weeks.

Extracts From the Spirit Messages of Prof. James

Here are some extracts from a long message, quoted by Mrs. Jane Revere Burke, of Milton, as sent to the world, through her, by Professor William James, Harvard psychologist. Professor James dictated the message, Mrs. Burke explains, through the Summer months of 1920. Mrs. Burke yielded herself to take the message down:

Mrs. Jane R. Burke.

"I am William James, who thought he knew a lot while he was on earth. Now I know that I know nothing."

"If you went to a distant part of the world to live, and your dearest never wrote to you, or sent you anything, you would be intensely pained. It is somewhat the same thing that can happen with us here." (Meaning, in the land of the dead.)

"You can never cease to regret the joys of earth that your dear ones are losing; but they, on their side, are longing to tell you of the unutterable joy that is theirs."

"If a worm refused to become a butterfly, it would not be half so silly as thousands—nay millions, of intelligent men and women who refuse to believe in a future life. 'The last enemy that shall be overcome, is death.'"

SENDS MESSAGE FROM GRAVE

Late Harvard Savant Calls on Former Pupils to Take God Into Their Pleasures

one evening, I had never even suspected myself of being psychic. I have never seen a Ouija Board in my life; never seen a planchette. What makes the fact that Professor James came to me all the more remarkable is that I never knew him, while he was on earth. Nor did I ever read one of his books. Since he has spoken to me, moreover, I have purposely refrained from reading his works."

Mrs. Burke, after telling her visitor this much, is silent for a moment. And while she is thus silent, there takes in the woman herself, and feels a little of the miracle.

For Mrs. Burke is a stately matron, dressed in white, with a strong pleasant face, and a superlatively common sense, clear way with her. And, most compelling of all, Mrs. Burke radiates the sincerity of her belief. Anyone may be skeptical who wished to be, but there is no one women who knows that Professor James has talked with earth. And that is Mrs. Burke, his instrument.

A RELIGIOUS DUTY.

"The thing is very wonderful to me," she tells you frankly. "Because, first of all, I don't like to write. I never write if I can help myself. If I have a seam to sew and a letter to get off—it's always the letter which waits. But this message came to me, it possessed me! I knew God was there, talking through Professor James. I knew it was a religious duty for me to take it down, and so I yielded myself, merely the instrument.

"The first message from Professor James came to me in June, 1920. My son had died in April, after an illness of many months, during which time I knew that, as far as earthly knowledge and skill went, there was absolutely no hope.

"On June 5, while reading the 'Abolishing of Death,' by Basil King, I felt that I could try to write." (Mrs. Burke refers to automatic writing, by which messages are sent from the spirit world, through automatic manipulation of the arm of the writer during which time the writer's mind is taken over by the spirit who dictates the writing.)

MESSAGE FROM SON.

"I sat down in the dark, and got, in the faintest writing — 'God will show you! Be content!'

From this first message, from Mrs. Burke's son, a message from her husband followed. Then, in the midst of such messages, one night, came 'William James with this announcement to Mrs. Burke.

"I am not your husband, but I have to get a chance to speak through you. My name is William James, of Cambridge, Mass., U. S. A.; the man who thought he knew a lot while he was on earth, but now that he has learned a little, he wants to tell the people on earth, through you. But you must rest now, God bless you. You have got a tremendous work to do, for God and His children."

"This was the first message I received from Professor James," explains Mrs. Burke. "It came in June, 1920. By August, the end, the book dictated by the professor, was finished. I cannot explain to anyone my deep conviction that I really have had speech with Professor James.

WROTE AS IF INSPIRED.

"The messages from Professor James came any hour of the day, but I wrote them out usually at night, because I had more time from my home duties then. The professor even advised about the paper. He told me to pay thirty cents a roll for it, and to get fifteen rolls. This I did. I took all the messages in pencil. Now, the way the writing was done, convinces me. I wrote as if inspired. My arm fairly flew across the paper. I felt exceedingly calm, mentally; but the physical action was very rapid.

"But there were deterrent spirits trying to keep Professor James from dictating to me, trying to draw me from taking the message. It was an evil spirit—a woman. Once she gave me an address and a name to write to some person on earth, who, she said, could tell me of her. I wrote, but the letter came back from the Dead Letter Office.

WORD GIVEN TO WORLD.

"So the word—Professor James' word, is given to the world. And I know it is not mine, but his. Because I know that never, of myself, would I be able, physically or mentally, to carry such an undertaking through, of myself; nor even to attempt such an undertaking. But it was executed by me, as it was dictated by Professor James, to help on people struggling in the darkness to righteousness and better understanding of The Way.

"For Professor James, in that other world, realizes that his late learning, so revered by his fellows, is of small account, compared to what he has since achieved. And he has come to fail faith in the old religion. And he explains to me, about his life across, here we have not fleshy bodies, yet we feel all our members just as completely. Man here having indulged in the sins of the flesh, has destroyed some vital part of his spiritual body. You make your spiritual body by the life you live upon earth—therefore if you want happiness, it behooves you to seek it, even with tears."

"Again, James explains, 'a very large part of the world today thinks that when death comes to a man his account is settled, and he goes to his place and his chance is over. That idea has gained such ascendency over the human race because it has in it a great amount of truth. Your earthly life is given you to make all your most important growth in.'

"And, further, he says: 'almost immediately after death, you find yourself possessed of the power to read or hear thoughts. As that is the case, you can easily see how soon you could learn to receive clear communications with us. Sometimes that means, months, sometimes years. The more complex you are, the more difficult it is to us to get in.'

City Wide Disturbances in Belfast—80-Year-Old Clergyman Shot

Dublin, June 13.—Seven persons were killed and forty wounded in week-end riots at Belfast, according to information from that city.

Dublin, June 12.—Two auxiliary policemen were shot dead in Thomas street. There has been another outbreak of killings in many places in Ireland.

A civilian found dead at Listarroll had a tag placard pinned to his clothing reading, "Spy."

Rioting featured the week's end in Belfast, with a number of killings and many reported wounded.

The rioting was city-wide Saturday night, three being killed, bringing the total to seven for the last two days. At least fifty have been wounded in the same time.

Sixteen persons were killed in week-end violence in Ireland said a Dublin dispatch.

An eighty-year-old retired clergyman was taken from his home at Bawnboy, County Cavan, and killed.

ASKS ARREST OF POLICEMAN

South Boston Maimed Veteran Charges Officer Clubbed Him

Michael J. McLaughlin, a one-armed veteran of the war who made charges a week ago against Patrolman Joseph O'Hanlon, alleging that the policeman severely beat him up unnecessarily, applied for a warrant for the patrolman's arrest today.

His testimony was heard by Judge Logan in the South Boston court. The case was taken under advisement.

McLaughlin testified he was standing in the doorway of his home at No. 92 C street, South Boston, when Hanlon ordered him to move away.

He did not obey immediately and according to his story the officer beat him over the head with his club, cutting his scalp in several places.

ELUDES OFFICER BY SWIMMING

Alleged Salisbury Beach Thief Escapes After Crossing Creek Four Times

Salisbury Beach, N. H., June 12.—Sylvester Eaton of Seabrook, N. H., is a good runner. He also is an excellent swimmer, according to the Salisbury police. The officers claim that Eaton stole two coats belonging to Alice Cuffmant of Jamaica Plain and Genevieve A. Burns of Roxbury from a cottage at Salisbury Beach.

The police went to Eaton's cottage and found two coats. He promised to return them, they say, but on the way with Officer Pierce suddenly darted away and made for North Marsh. He dove into the creek and Officer Pierce close behind fired two shots, but failed to register a hit.

Officer Pierce, not to be outdone, dove in with uniform and all. Eaton reached the other side a few moments ahead of Pierce, with other officers close in the rear. Then the chase began. When Pierce would be close Eaton would dive in and swim across the creek, and repeated this four times within a mile. He then hid in the tall grass and escaped.

DRUG USING IS ON INCREASE IN BOSTON, DECLARES WEBBER

BRITAIN BLAMED FOR DOPE TRADE BY EX-PROSECUTOR

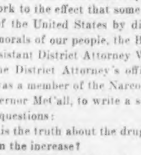
In view of a statement made by Police Commissioner Enright of New York to the effect that some foreign countries are plotting the ruin of the United States by distributing narcotics to undermine the morals of our people, the Boston American has requested Former Assistant District Attorney Webber, who has been associated with the District Attorney's office here for ten years and at one time was a member of the Narcotic Drug Commission, appointed by Governor McCall, to write a series of articles answering the following questions:

What is the truth about the drug traffic in Boston?
Is it on the increase?
If so, is prohibition to blame?
Where does Boston's supply of drugs come from?
Is there an attempt by any European nation or nations to spread the traffic in the United States?
Is the spectre of a nation of drug addicts—a favorite argument of the anti-prohibitionists—becoming real?
Is there a solution of the evil?

By ABRAHAM C. WEBBER
(Former Assistant District-Attorney of Suffolk County.)

It has been claimed that it is as easy to obtain dope today in Boston as it ever was.

Whether this is true or not, it is known that thousands of men and women are habitually using more than ever before and other drugs to the detriment of their health and morals and to the detriment of future generations.



Abraham C. Webber

This is in spite of the fact that prohibition has the best set of anti-drug laws in the country and despite the record of a few years ago that Boston was the cleanest city in this respect in the country.

Naturally the assumption follows that prohibition is in a measure responsible for the increased traffic. To such conclusion this is not the answer. There are other agencies all tending to make drug taking more general and of more serious extent.

To begin with, who are the drug users and where do they pick up the habit?

NOT HELD AS DISEASE.

To answer these questions one must understand that drug addicts in the beginning are not normal. They are the failures of society—they lack will power; they are the kind that are ready at all times to find the easiest way rather than to face the battles of everyday life.

Persons with normal nerves do not regard drug taking as a disease. It is a condition arrived at through gradual and increasing appetite for what is craving. It can be cured and is cured.

The methods of curing differ and there, I am sorry to say, is an evil that has led to increase in the facility of obtaining dope instead of fulfilling its apparent purpose.

I refer to the so-called "stepping-up" method, which to my mind has been sadly misused and in many cases has been nothing more than a regulated process of drug trafficking.

DRUG TAKING NOT FUN.

A lenient and an accommodating tapering-off system often is nothing more than a means of supplying the weak addict with more dope.

Drug taking is not fun. The addict is a social outcast. He is despised. He should not be referred to as a "fiend," but instead should be regarded as a victim of circumstances—a person who needs all the help that can be rendered him and our institutions can give.

Dope takers do not generally take the habit for the purpose of pleasure or for pleasure, or dissipation as may do the heavy users of liquor. An addict has to make him appear normal; to make him able to walk and act naturally; in other words to make him or you or I.

When he becomes an habitual taker he feels that the drug is really necessary to life itself. Without it he suffers horribly, yet, I have never seen a drug user in all my experience that did not want to rid himself of the habit.

TRACED TO CIVIL WAR.

The drug habit made its serious inroads in this country directly after the Civil War. The more or less indiscriminate use of morphine by doctors on wounded soldiers is supposed to have led to the habit fastening itself on these unfortunate men and often on their families.

This may be true and it is not an improbable theory that the present increasing evil can be traced to the last war and to the same cause.

There are no doubt thousands of wounded and shell-shocked heroes home to America bringing with them the knowledge that morphine and other drugs are "godsends" in relieving pain and nervousness. Later, that they are slaves to the dope curse.

I cannot get myself to associate drug taking and prohibition. The whiskey drinker and the dope user are altogether different calibre and I have found that a heavy drinker seldom takes to dope, while a drug user will do what will attempt to satisfy his drug craving with alcohol in very rare

INCREASING IN BOSTON.

The drug addict feels that he must have his favored drug at any cost.

In Boston the indiscriminate taking of drugs is gradually increasing. To-day the dope is being distributed around as it was in no time but at comparatively lower prices. The price for which the stuff is sold is a question of the freedom with which it can be obtained.

Today I am told, it is selling around $10 an ounce. Less than four years ago it brought as much as $100 an ounce, or $1 a grain, here in Boston.

Scores of men and women are making huge incomes in this reprehensible traffic. We are fortunate here in Massachusetts in having laws to deal with teeth in them, which would stop this traffic if the laws were properly enforced.

BRITAIN IS TO BLAME.

The evil must be necessarily traced directly to source. Laxity on the part of our institutions, failure on the part of the government to stop the illegal importation and lastly an apparent indifference on the part of our own people all tend to call attention to the Canadian line where most of the illicit supply comes from.

It is a far cry from Boston to Great Britain and yet the drug can be stopped at its source if the government of that country made it no particular business to turn its head and wink at the huge international drug distribution that has its origin from which morphine is a derivative, and which in turn must come from without.

More than 75 per cent of the drugs used illegally in the United States, it is claimed, comes from overseas to Canada and from there is smuggled into this country. Independent or united action on the part of this country and Canada will stop the drug traffic almost over night.

STOPPING DOES NOT KILL.

This assertion, I know, will bring a wail that thousands of addicts will be caused if the habitual user should be deprived of his supply. To this I say emphatically that they would not die—indeed have a few years ago.

That is the argument that made the drug distributing—the "stepping-ups" and sanatoriums so profitable. Stop the distribution of drugs and soon you will give a new life to thousands upon thousands of drug slaves.

Prohibition is not to blame. Disprove the false argument of the quack dope-seeking doctor.

Boston police, scores of men and women around Boston who have been sent to jail, often after a period of years, when absolutely deprived of drugs and who have ridden out cured of the habit.

I have known addicts to be cured where from twenty to forty pounds on this so-called torture. There is no question but that many of these men not meet some former drug addict who has "come through" as being best to go and they are glad of it.

WIFE BALKED AT MURDER PRICE

Charge for Slaying Kaber Was $5,000, Alleged Accomplice Declares

By International News Service.

Cleveland, O., June 12.—A charge of murder in the first degree was made early today against Mrs. Ermonia (Emma) Colavito, of Cleveland, in connection with the murder of Daniel F. Kaber, wealthy Lakewood publisher, for whose death July 18, 1919 his wife, mother-in-law and step-daughter are already under indictment and arrest. Mrs. Colavito is the woman arrested in Sandusky last Wednesday.

She was indicted upon the charge of first degree murder by the Grand Jury at noon today.

The formal charge which was made by Chief of Police Peter S. Christensen of Lakewood followed a detailed statement made by the woman, in which she further implicated Mrs. Kaber and her daughter, Marian.

She declared in this statement that the assassins visited the Kaber home in Lakewood previous to the actual killing to get the lay of the land and that Marian, in order to keep their visit secret from the invalid publisher, played loudly upon the family piano.

Mrs. Kaber, according to Mrs. Colavito's statement, balked at paying the price wanted by the assassins, $5,000 for the crime, unless it could be done in such a manner as to permit her to collect on an accident insurance policy which Kaber carried.

The accused also detailed how a pitcher of water was to be spilled from an upper window on the night of the murder as a signal that the coast was clear. Another development was the ending of the "Hunger strike" on the part of Mrs. Kaber and Marian.

RENFREWS IN QUEER TANGLE

Newton Man's Secret Wedding May Be Annulled if Insanity Charges Are Proven

A strange matrimonial entanglement comes to light with the commitment of Robert W. Renfrew of Newtonville to the Boston Psychopathic Hospital for observation as to his sanity.

Renfrew in July, 1918, secretly married in Exeter, N. H., Mrs. Sarah Chandler Shapley, a wealthy Newton widow, the question of whose sanity has engaged the attention of the courts of Massachusetts for years.

According to the Massachusetts laws Renfrew and Mrs. Shapley are not legally married if the woman is still insane.

The court contests of Mrs. Shapley since her first commitment to the Medfield asylum several years ago, have made the woman's case one of the strangest in the history of the courts. It is estimated that more than 150 lawyers have been interested in it from time to time.

Strangely one of her former attorneys, Dr. James A. Keown, of Lynn was adjudged insane after he had taken up her case and now her "husband," who, previous to the marriage, petitioned the court for her release from the asylum as "her best friend," is under suspicion as being similarly affected.

The matrimonial mixup, which involves the legality of the secret wedding, also brings to the front the mystery connected with the fortune which Mrs. Shapley inherited from her husband, the late George H. Shapley.

Renfrew, since his commitment, declares her fortune has dwindled from $1,000,000 to $25,000.

The whole matter is confusing inasmuch as she was married after a probate court had adjudged her sane but before the hearing on an appeal on this issue was completed.

Seventy-five members of the Puddingstone Club, representing a business and professional line in Boston, were entertained by Carl Dreyfus, the Summer street wholesale dress goods merchant, at his beautiful estate, Thornledge, at Marblehead.

The affair was in truth a return to boyhood moment, Stern business men and astute public servants and leading physicians forgot their business and professional worries for the time being and spent the day in play.

The feature of the day was an old-fashioned district school. The pedagogues were Professor Leacock of Harvard and Stanwood Field, an instructor in the Boston schools.

Among the "pupils" were the Rev. Charles F. Dole and Robert Lincoln O'Brien. The latter also made a brief address.

When school "broke up" a dinner was served on one of the terraces of the estate overlooking Marblehead Bay. The outing was voted one of the best in the history of the club.

GARY BITTERLY FLAYS LABOR

Warns College Men of "Poison Seeping Into Citizenship of America"

Syracuse, N. Y., June 13.—The death of merit, the substitution of labor unionism for constitutionalism, and the creation of a system of government the roots of which would be "Inequality of Opportunity"—these are the fruits of the dire evils that labor union leaders are sweeping their following towards in their fight against capital, according to Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation.

Speaking at the commencement exercises of Syracuse University, Judge Gary delivered himself of his most bitter denunciation of the poison that is seeping into the splendid citizenship of America.

He warned that the colleges and universities of this country must be saved from becoming cesspools of socialism. He said in part:

"The platform of union labor leaders is antithesis of the principle of equal opportunity.

"Industrially, the individual can realize the full advantages of the opportunities of this country only through the principles of the open shop as distinguished from the dominance and arbitrary control of the union labor leaders."

In his defense of capital Judge Gary painted America a veritable millennium of opportunity, a bounteous haven of hope. He declared every young man and woman should feel capable of accumulating some capital.

He launched into a bitter tirade against socialism in Russia and declared that attempts have been made to spread the disease to this country. Judge Gary declared that if capital was seized and divided equally civilization would fail.

IMPERSONATING AN OFFICER CHARGED

Charged with impersonating an officer, Thomas Williams of Bennington street, East Boston, was in East Boston Court today, and the case against him continued until Wednesday. He pleaded not guilty. Marie Modeco, No. 186 Summer street, East Boston, testified that Williams and two other men attempted to hold him up in his store Saturday night, but that he broke away, seized a monkey wrench and the three fled.

ACCEPT 10-CENT CUT IN SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, June 13.—Painters and electricians have accepted the wage cut of 10 cents an hour offered by the master builders of the city, and reported back to work today, according to an announcement from labor headquarters. Carpenters and plumbers are still out on strike.

STILLMAN GETS 2 WITNESSES

Banker Bringing Them From Quebec to Testify Against Mate as Case Is Resumed

New York, June 13.—James A. Stillman, former president of the National City Bank, has brought two more witnesses from Canada, it is will testify against his wife when the hearing in the famous divorce suit is resumed before Referee Gleason in Poughkeepsie.

The new witnesses are from Three Rivers, Quebec.

Upon hearings, with the evidence heard in public, at the demand of Mrs Stillman and her lawyers in the future conduct of the celebrated divorce proceedings which will be resumed on Wednesday.

Counsel for Mrs. Stillman will not admit it, but it is declared in his a fact that in the aggressive counter-attacks planned the names of two persons of high character are to be used. One is a woman, and the other is a man who was for years chummy with "Jimmy" Stillman.

Mrs. Howard Cushing is the society woman who will be a witness for Mrs. Stillman. It is understood she has important testimony to give. Just what line her testimony will take when she is called in the stand is not revealed.

The man who is to be the witness in the case is John H. Prentice of Clark, Dodge & Co. of Wall Street. He is intimate with "Jimmy" Stillman for years. They were "Jimmy" and "Jack" to each other. He is said to be custodian of certain information as to "Flo" Leeds and "Jimmy" Stillman aboard the Modesty.

Hundreds of Girls Offer to Be Joyce's "Love Toy"

Chicago, June 13.—One of the peculiar results of the widespread publicity given the Peggy Joyce-Stanley Joyce case came to notice today when Joyce's attorneys revealed he has received hundreds of requests fro girls all over the country seeking to become his "love toy."

An "auburn haired girl" wrote from Texas:

"Please inform Mr. Joyce that there are thousands of women in the world who would love to be in the movies or playhouse. I am only a Texas girl, but I sure would be delighted to be his doll. I have lived in New York and Chicago and would like nothing better than to return to it."

Other letters were even more outspoken.

ADD RED CROSS TO WAR PROBE

Senate to Look Into Charges of Profiting in Sale of Canteen Supplies

Washington, June 12.—Charges that the Red Cross profited handsomely on canteen supplies such as tobacco, cigarettes and chocolate sold to soldiers of the American Expeditionary Forces, though the people of this country contributed millions of dollars to the organization with the impression that they were to be distributed free, are to be thoroughly investigated by the Senate.

The investigation will be undertaken in connection with the Senate inquiry into the treatment of ex-service soldiers and ex-service men by the government and private institutions.

At the same time the searchlight of Congress will be turned on conditions exposed by the New York American where injured veterans were charged a fee by the Red Cross for assistance in settling their claims against the government for compensation and insurance.

SIGNAL SENT FOR FLANAGAN RAID

Wife First Made Drunk by Accomplice, She Claims, in New Testimony

Mrs. Mabel C. Flanagan, whose husband, Dr. Frank J. Flanagan, was granted a divorce from her, today outlined the evidence she hopes to introduce if her petition that the divorce decree be set aside and a new trial allowed, is granted.

According to affidavits filed by Mrs. Flanagan, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Raymond of No. 15 Rockford street, Roxbury, who formerly occupied an apartment at No. 111 Warren street, Roxbury, will be her star witnesses.

Mr. Raymond will testify, according to the statement, that Dr. Flanagan said during the raid on Mrs. Flanagan's apartment: "I had to get her drunk to pull off that job and I have been trying for seven years to get my wife, and I had to frame her up to get her."

The affidavit states that Mr. Raymond is prepared to testify "that a woman whose name I have been told is Hazel Jordan, and who was present with Mrs. Flanagan, said to me, 'I was in flash a signal with a flashlight out the window by Dr. Flanagan, who was waiting outside, and I have been working for three weeks on Mrs. Flanagan to get her in this position, but it was a very hard job because she would not drink enough.'"

B. U. AWARDS 456 DEGREES

Tremont Temple Crowded at Commencement Exercises. Ferguson Speaks

Tremont Temple was crowded today for the commencement exercises of Boston University, at which 456 degrees were conferred.

John C. Ferguson, adviser to the President of the Chinese Republic and graduate of Boston University, spoke on "Gleanings from Cathay."

"The revolution of 1911-1912 in China," said the speaker, "was only one incident in the conflict between centralized and decentralized government.

"Until China returns to the system of provincial autonomy now being attempted in Canton province and abandons the attempt to build up a strong central government around some standing figure its internal affairs cannot be settled.

"The attempts to solve this question by force of arms such as have already been made several times since 1911 is worse than useless; it is disastrous to the general interests of the country.

The youngest girl to receive a bachelor of laws degree this year from the Boston University Law School is Miss Elsie Ruth Gens of Lawrence. Miss Gens is nineteen years old. Only two other girls were graduated with Miss Gens from the Law School.

Free Tolls Bill Is Recommended

By International News Service.

Washington, June 13.—The Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals voted today to recommend favorably to the Senate the Borah bill providing that "no tolls shall be levied upon vessels passing through the Panama Canal engaged in the coastwise trade of the United States."

The committee's action was unanimous. It is believed to foreshadow early favorable action by the Senate on "free tolls" for American coastwise vessels using the canal.

CHOKES DOG TO SAVE CHILDREN

Jimmy Murphy, Philadelphia Pugilist, Bitten While Killing Mad Brute

Philadelphia, June 12.—The heroism of Jimmy Murphy, one of Philadelphia's leading welterweight pugilists, saved a number of children from certain injury and possible death late yesterday. Murphy choked a mad bulldog to death as it was about to attack the youngsters. In killing the dog, Murphy's hands and arms were severely torn.

The dog, one of the powerful type used in fighting pits, attacked its owner, and his wife, following him both, and then sought to leap in a baby carriage to attack a child. The baby fled in terror with his dog.

Turning from the carriage, the dog raced for a number of children. Murphy saw it coming and leaped between the mad brute and its prey. As it sprang for him he grasped it and then began a fight-ful struggle. While the children huddled behind him terrified, Murphy slowly choked the dog to death.

110 Awards of $5 each	550
Total	$6,000

TITLE IN LIST.

The correct title of Test Picture No. 5, in the $6,000 Songs of the World Title Test will be found—"can" be found, rather—in the List of Titles printed below it.

One title in today's list is the correct title of today's picture.

The correct title is the title which fits the picture better than any other title in the list.

The $6,000 Songs of the World Test will consist of sixty pictures, each drawn in the manner of today's and each printed without its title. IT WILL BE THE BUSINESS OF PARTICIPANTS IN THE TEST TO WRITE A TITLE FOR EACH OF THE SIXTY PICTURES. THE AWARDS WILL GO TO THOSE WITH THE LARGEST NUMBERS OF CORRECT TITLES.

With each day's Test Picture there will be a List of Titles containing the Correct Title. The List will, of course, contain many other titles. Some of them may appear to fit the picture. The Correct Title WILL fit the picture; not only that, but fit it better than any other title in the List.

It would be unfair to participants in this $6,000 Song Test that these generous awards can be earned without an effort. It can be started with an explanation in the world that each of the persons who are now at workplace at the end of the Song Title Test will have put forth earnest and persistent effort.

If the Test Editor ever had any other idea about a "Title Test" he has changed his mind since interviewing some of the readers in the recent $2,000 Movie Play Title Test.

TREE REQUIRES SHAKING.

In like manner, it is true that those who will capture the $750, $300, $400, $300, $200, $150, $100 and $50 awards will do a deal of hustling. This money grows upon a tree, in a manner of speaking, but the tree will require shaking. The fruit is not to be enjoyed by those who merely lie upon their backs and open their mouths.

You may not find it difficult to find the correct title to today's picture. Homorrow's may as easy. Sooner or later, however, the artist will hit his stride. Watch him! It is his business ultimately to lead you off the trail of Correct Titles. In the recent Test, he began to show his teeth at Picture No. 23. The title placed before him for illustration was "The Kid."

The artist's idea of illustrating "The Kid" was to draw the picture of a fishing vessel. In the picture two men are seen chatting together on deck. They discuss the PEN in which fish are kept.

Who—indeed—he had previous experience in a Test of the kind, or enjoyed the benefit of advice from some contest "veteran"—would think of connecting "The Kid" with that sort of picture?

Thousands of contestants, observing the title "The Kid" in the day's List of Titles, promptly dismissed it as having no possible connection with the picture.

HOW THEY SUCCEEDED.

How did anybody succeed in getting that particular title?

The veterans in affairs of the kind undoubtedly took up every title in a List of Titles. Those who went through that particular list ultimately stumbled upon a nugget of information like this:

Kid—A box or wooden pen constructed on the deck of a fishing vessel to receive the fish as they are caught.

For the best title of the picture in question the great majority chose "Some Liar," "The Money Corral," "In Again, Out Again," "As Luck Would Have It," "Throwing the Bull," "The Drag Net" or "The Sea Master."

Which is exactly what the artist expected they would do! But the Correct Title was "The Kid." That was the title the artist had been asked to illustrate. The picture was his idea of the best possible illustration.

FOR TEST PURPOSES.

Please observe the last three words, "for Test purposes." If this were not a TEST, the picture of a "barefoot boy, with cheeks of tan" would have served. Or, a picture of Charlie and Jackie Coogan. That would have been ideal! You are taking part in a TEST, however. Thousands of other clever persons are in it. The artist does not intend that every one of you shall have sixty Correct Titles. Not by a little brown jugful!

Winners in the recent Movie Play Title Test will not thank the Test Editor. The artist began to cuss about done. The artist began to cuss about it weeks ago. The writer's Big Boss is not entirely satisfied that the Test Editor is wise in lifting the curtain. To make public the secret of the Test is to inform thousands of willing workers exactly how to go about winning.

WIDE OPEN TO ALL.

This revelation will serve another purpose. YOU may profit by it. It will discourage, now, those who take a "test to be a guessing matter. The indolent and the indifferent will drop out by hundreds. The industrious will remain—to give Mr. Artist the battle of his life.

Now, you have the whole story. The $6,000 Songs of the World Title Test is wide open to you. It is open to every New Englander and every Canadian. It costs nothing to enter. You do not have to enroll. You need not buy a single copy of the Boston American. At the end of the Test, sixty Pictures and sixty Titles must be sent in, but the sixty Pictures may—if you like—be "free-hand" or tracing-paper copies of the pictures in a set belongin,, to some friend or acquaintance.

Please remember that Pictures and Titles must NOT be sent in before the end of the Test. Send in nothing before the Test is ended. Read the Rules.

Every day, remember, a Test Picture, and every day a list of Titles containing the Correct Title. It is in your part of the Test to find the correct title in the List every day and write it on the line reserved for that purpose immediately below the cut.

The $6,000 Songs of the World Title Test is exclusively a Boston American enterprise. The Test Pictures and Lists of Titles will be printed on week days only, and only in this newspaper.

The one way to be certain of your Boston American every day is to place a standing order with the newsdealer. The two weeks are worth trying in conjunction with Mrs. Tamson Sullivan and Mrs. Dolly Mayor of the local department and Lieutenant Claire Chaney and Officer John Tighe.

The heads of both police departments are determined that crime shall be stamped out at the popular Summer resort. They say that an influx of undesirable visitors has already begun, and it is against these persons that the activities of the policewomen are directed.

Rules of the Song Title Test

The Boston American Songs of the World Title Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and twenty cash awards will be given by this newspaper to the readers who submit the largest percentage of correct titles to the sixty pictures to be published each day consecutively (Sundays excepted) in the Boston American.

All employees of the Boston American and their families are debarred from participating in the Test.

The first will consist of 60 pictures, each representing the title of a song, which will be printed one each day in the Boston American, the first picture on Wednesday, June 8, 1921.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which may be run by the Boston American will not bar any one from entering this test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only ONE TITLE to each picture, and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award, and not more than one award shall be given to any one family.

Each set of titles must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American; on on a page of some book form of itself, accompanied either by the picture furnished by the Boston American, or by a tracing, free-hand sketch or exact duplicate of the picture furnished by the Boston American. In no case must the titles be written on separate slips of paper.

In case there are not complete sets of correct titles, awards will be given to the person submitting the largest correct solutions.

The neatness, skill and judgment displayed in the awards will be made on the basis of neatness, skill and judgment displayed, but if the neatness is decided in that way the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their titles before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your titles from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and send them in at one time. Titles sent in before the close will not be a factor in making the awards. The first titles sent in after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All titles must be delivered to the Boston American title headquarters, at No. 50 Summer street, Boston, by messenger or by mail or in person, within the specified time limit after the close of the Song Title Test.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be legibly addressed as follows: "Song Title Editor, Boston American, 50 Summer street, Boston 9, Mass., P. O. Box 239," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or printed in the upper left-hand corner.

As all entrances to the Test will consist of written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the packages be fully prepaid at postal rates, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first-class matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse to consider any sets of titles on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no title or answer book to buy. Lists of Song Titles will be printed in the Boston American. The list each day will contain among others the correct titles.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Song Title Editor, not to the Boston American. All letters addressed to the Editor will be answered as far as possible through the columns of the Boston American. If participants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such a reply or they may phone Main 5100 or call in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any changes in, or additions to these rules that may be deemed necessary from time to time. The decision of the Boston American Song Title Editor in any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

feet and rendered him helpless. In a twinkling she had the handcuffs on him.

POLICEWOMAN UNRUFFLED.

At the end of the struggle, Mrs. Sugrue, who is tall and of powerful physique, was hardly ruffled, while Trask showed evidences of rough handling. He was arraigned in court today together with Edith Laurence, thirty-three years old, of Billerica. They were found guilty of misconduct, the woman being sentenced Sharborne. Trask's case was continued to June 22.

According to the police, he met the woman in Haverhill and took her to the beach, where he came under the eyes of the two policewomen.

Under instructions from Chief Dyer of the Revere department and Chief West of the metropolitan park police, the two women are working in conjunction with Mrs. Tamson Sullivan and Mrs. Dolly Mayor of the local department and Lieutenant Claire Chaney and Officer John Tighe.

The heads of both police departments are determined that crime shall be stamped out at the popular Summer resort. They say that an influx of undesirable visitors has already begun, and it is against these persons that the activities of the policewomen are directed.

Asks Disarmament

A resolution calling on the Federal government to take the lead in calling an international conference to consider immediate world-wide limitation of armaments was adopted by the congregation of the First Congregational (Unitarian) Church, Jamaica Plain.

SACCO COUNSEL IS REBUKED

Judge Thayer Reprimands Attorney Moore for Criticizing Witness

him as the man she talked with, was begun by Attorney Moore.

OFFERED TRIP.

To test the witness' powers of observation, Attorney Moore asked her to describe the guard who showed her through Dedham jail when she first identified Sacco and a man she accosted on the platform of South Braintree station on the day of the murder. She couldn't describe either man.

A trip to Stockton Springs, Me., was offered to Mrs. Andrews by Attorney Moore, as an inducement in connection with her testimony, she said.

This testimony was brought out by Moore, in cross-examination, when he asked: "Have I offered you any inducement in connection with your testimony in this case?"

Mrs. Andrews replied: "The only inducement you offered me was a chance to go to Maine. When I told you that my friend, Mrs. Julia Campbell of Stockton Springs, was with me in South Braintree when I spoke to Sacco three hours before the murder, you asked me if I would like to go down to see Mrs. Campbell for a sort of vacation."

"Do you mean to imply that I offered you a trip to Maine?" asked Moore.

LITTLE VACATION.

"You asked me if I would like to go to Stockton Springs for a little vacation.

"Tell the jury all that was said," replied the lawyer.

"I told you that I had a new position and that I was afraid I would lose my work if I went to Maine."

"Did I offer any other inducement?"

"Well, you told me if I lost my work you would see that I got a job just as good or better than the one I had."

Attorney Moore's cross-examination did not shake the testimony of Mrs. Andrews in any essential detail.

BREAKS DOWN.

Mrs. Andrews broke down and began to cry as she left the witness stand during a conference between Judge Webster Thayer and the attorneys when the question of how far Attorney Moore would be permitted to go into her past history was discussed.

Just before the breakdown came she asked: "Must I go into all that?" when Mr. Moore questioned her as to her living quarters. She testified that she hires rooms 8 and 9 in the Alhambra Building, Quincy, occupies 8 and rents 9 to a Mr. Cummings. She said she takes care of Mr. Cummings.

Mrs. Andrews has been a waitress at various places. She came from Augusta, Me.

She denied saying to anyone that all she could say about Sacco was that he resembled in complexion and size the man she saw near the crime scene three hours before the double murder, and denied telling "Harry, the tailor," of Quincy, the day she returned from Dedham jail after seeing Sacco, "I'm tired of all this; they want me to say he (Sacco) is the man and how can I tell when I do not remember?"

BODY OF TAGLIERI BOY FOUND IN SEA

The body of two-year-old Peter Taglieri of No. 519 Hanover street, last seen May 29, was recovered in the ocean near Gloucester. Medical Examiner P. P. Moore of Gloucester pronounced death due to accidental drowning. Police state there is nothing to substantiate the early suspicion of the parents that the child was slain by black-handers. It is believed he fell into the water in the harbor here and was carried thirty miles to Gloucester.

Poor Eyes Seen as Child Crime Cause

San Francisco, June 13.—"Ninety per cent. of the school children's eyes are imperfect. At least 60 per cent. are being used at a disadvantage. Many a child, groping with poor eyes and struggling with an education against this handicap, becomes not only a stupid child but a rebellious child, a truant child; and a truant child is a criminal in embryo."

Optometrists throughout the State will attempt a solution of this problem as presented in a statement by Dr. Cassius D. Westcott of the American Medical Association, through co-operation with school authorities at the California State Opticians and Optometrists' Association convention in San Francisco today.

MOVIE LAW TEST PAPERS READY

Judge J. A. Brackett to Supervise Distribution of Petitions

Referendum petitions to halt the operation of the motion picture censorship law until the people themselves exercise their right to accept or reject it were ready for circulation throughout the State.

The form in which the question will appear upon the ballot at the State election next year was approved by Attorney-General Allen and copies of the petitions were issued by Secretary of State Cook.

Judge J. Albert Brackett of Boston will supervise the work of distributing the petitions for 12,000 signatures. If that number of signatures are received, the law will be automatically suspended. The voters will then decide at the next State election whether the law shall be accepted or rejected.

In addition to Judge Brackett, the petitioners for the referendum against the law include Mayor Peter F. Sullivan of Worcester, Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Worcester, Anna M. Marsh of the Worcester School Committee, Sybil H. Holmes, the author; Carolyn M. Emler of the Lynn School Committee, Dr. Michael H. Donovan, Health Commissioner of Lynn; Vice-President Arthur H. Smith of the Cambridge Board of Trade and Secretary Henry Abrahams of the Boston Central Labor Union.

DEMAND LABOR ACT ON ERIN

Irish Leaders Determined That A. F. of L. Shall "Go the Limit" on Issue

By International News Service.

Denver, Colo., June 13.—The forty-first annual convention of the American Federation of Labor opened here today with the opposition planning to rebuke the leadership of Samuel Gompers.

Those who charge that he does not support America's interference in the Irish controversy and is out of sympathy with the Irish cause were boasting that the veteran labor head will be made to bow to the Sinn Fein.

The railroad unions, which charge he has done little to put into effect the declaration of last year's convention on government ownership and democratic control of the railroads, plan to bind him to definite action. Irish sympathizers of all factions are lining up with demands that the convention "Go to the limit" on the Irish question.

According to reports, Harry Boland, De Valera's secretary, who is still in this country, has sent resolution to be presented to the Irish sympathizers' meeting when they meet to draft their program for the convention. The resolutions, it is rumored, provide for the appointment of a labor commission of three to call upon President Harding and later to go to England and Ireland to survey conditions and co-operate in action with the labor forces in both countries. They are also said to provide a boycott by organized labor on all British-made goods.

According to reports, the resolutions were placed in the hands of Peter J. Brady of New York with definite instructions to act.

He is known as a Gompers supporter. He confirms claims of the anti-Gompers faction that Gompers will "go along with" the convention action on the Irish question, however extreme it may be.

Letters in answer to a circular sent out by the labor bureau of the American Commission for Irish Independence to put labor leaders on record on the Irish question were made public today. They ask for a personal statement on the Irish question," says Gompers in his answer. "A personal statement from me would not be as effective as the declaration made by the convention of the American Federation of Labor regarding the Irish question.

"Permit me to add that I am a member of the American Committee for Relief in Ireland."

One Month for Assault

Maurice O'Brien, twenty-five years old, of No. 1 Sharon street, South End, was given a month in the House of Correction in South Boston today for assaulting Daniel Tierney, a fellow-worker at a South Boston warehouse. O'Brien appealed.

"Prices realized in Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in Boston for week ending Saturday, June 11th, on shipments sold out ranged from 16.50 cents to 17.50 cents per pound and averaged 17.38 cents per pound."—Adv.

Only U. S. Flags in Irish Parade July 4

New York, June 13.—Only the flag of the United States will be carried in the parade to be held July 4 by the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic. This was decided by a vote of delegates from the councils of the organization, who met in Carmelite Hall, East Twenty-ninth street.

Fifty thousand people are expected in the parade.

William Randolph Hearst has been invited to preside at patriotic exercises which will be held on the Sheep Meadow in Central Park following the parade. Philip Francis will read the Declaration of Independence. Martin H. Glynn, former Governor of New York, will make a patriotic address.

FINE SAILOR FOR STRIKING GIRL

Bowen Also Held to Answer Indictment on Similar Charge

Charged with drunkenness and assault and battery on Frances Hayden of Derby Place, Roxbury, John Joseph Bowen, twenty-one years old, a seaman on the U. S. S. Converse was fined $5 on the first count and $10 on the second by Judge Hayden in the Roxbury court today.

Special Officer Michael J. Hartnett of the Roxbury Crossing station told the court that there was an indictment returned against Bowen by the Grand Jury last week, in which another young woman is involved, and Judge Hayden continued the case to ascertain if Bowen is still wanted by the Superior Court. Bail was set at $400.

To Keep Face Youthful, Fresh, Wrinkle Free

More important than the cosmetic care of the complexion is its physical care. To keep the face clear, fresh, youthful, have a nothing better than ordinary cucumber cream. It actively absorbs the dead or faded worn-out skin particles, for all means, sanitary the cucumber was habit. It's so easy to get an ounce of this at the drug store and wash it off right like cold cream and notice the difference next morning. Before going off to sleep rub the old skin coming off so gradually, so one never notices it's being worthless. When in a week or two you the alluringly youthful results of cucumber is fully in view—and you will be almost beyond belief that this process means complete freedom of all pimples, blotches and blackheads.

For a cooling or fragrant bath made by dissolving a few ounces of pure powdered sulphur in a half pint witch hazel, surpasses mudpack cream and everything else for results. Just try it!—Advertisement.

GARDEN SEIZED OPPORTUNITY

Opera Diva Won First Great Success Because She Was Prepared

The sixth installment of Mary Garden's picture of her own life as sketched by the famous opera singer herself for the readers of the Hearst newspapers is given below:

By MARY DOUGHERTY.

"You ask me why that great success came to me?

"I answer when opportunity came I was ready to embrace it!

"I believe that opportunity will never fail to come when you are ready!

"But opportunity often does come when you are not ready.

"I made a sensational debut in 'Louise' because I was ready—I knew every word of the opera, every note of it. . . . I was ready to live 'Louise.' I was ready to step on the stage at the moment that woman's voice flagged . . . and the only reason I was ready was because I never ceased my study of that role until I mastered every detail of it.

"Never in my life have I sung more than an hour and a half a day, but for hours and hours and hours a day I studied and thought 'Louise' . . . and breathed, and breathed, and breathed. . . .

"And let me tell you right now that the very greatest single element in singing is breathing . . . not another thing counts until you have learned how to breathe . . . and nothing ever counts so much!

Be Ready and Waiting, Not Waiting and Unprepared.

"But to get back to Opportunity . . . be ready and waiting . . . not waiting and unprepared!

"I know not what my life might have been had I not been ready to sing 'Louise.' . . . I might have had to go on as 'Michaela' in 'Carmen,' or some other mi-or role . . . and I might have gone on singing minor roles for years before an opportunity came for me to dominate the stage!

"Then when I made a success of my first appearance Carre was so inspired that he put on the new version of 'La Traviata,' and it was I who created 'La Traviata' as Mme. Bernhardt played 'La Dame Aux de Camelias.'

"It was another tremendous success, and then I was given a chance to sing 'Manon.'

Created Greatest of All Modern Operas.

"After that I created what I consider the greatest of all modern operas, 'Pelleas and Melisande.' Next came 'Queen Fiametta,' which was quite a success, and which Farrar later created at the Metropolitan.

"My next creation was 'La Fille de Tabaran,' then 'Helene,' by Saint-Saens; 'Cherubin,' by Massenet, which, like 'Le Jongleur de Notre Dame,' is a boy role, and then came 'Aphrodite.'

"All the opera world re-echoed to the sensation of my 'Aphrodite,' and while the applause was still echoing in my ears word came to me one day in my apartments that Oscar Hammerstein was waiting downstairs to see me.

"'Who is Oscar Hammerstein?' said I, to the person who presented the card.

"'An American impresario,' was the reply.

"'I am not interested in him,' I replied . . . a bit high strung, I suppose, over my triumphs, and a bit exhausted as well, no doubt.

Missed Opportunity of Offer From Hammerstein

"'So that is the way she treats me,' said he sadly, as he turned away, they afterward told me.

"Poor old Oscar Hammerstein . . . who clung to the spar of his ideals in operatic production that might reasonably have foundered a stouter heart!

"I thought, of course, he would send me a wire, and beg an interview. But not Oscar Hammerstein . . . he sailed that next day for America . . . and for my pique I missed the opportunity of receiving a flattering proposal from the greatest operatic director in my own country.

"Some time later on I received a letter from Mr. Schirmer, the great music publisher, asking 'would Miss Garden please permit Mr. Schirmer to come and see her . . . as his business is important.'

"I said 'Yes.' When he came he introduced himself as coming on behalf of Mr. Oscar Hammerstein, who was bitterly disappointed, Mr. Schirmer said, at not being able to see me himself, but who still cherished the hope that somehow I could be induced to come to the Manhattan.

"I said I was very sorry . . . that I had thought Mr. Hammerstein would call again . . . and the interview ended when I said I would consider his proposal . . . and that if I went to America I would bring to America what they had never had before . . . modern French opera.

Visit To America Fraught With Trouble

"Mr. Schirmer was so enthusiastic he went out an doubled Oscar Hammerstein . . . and that dear old soul hoarded the next steamer and crossed the ocean again to see me.

"When Mr. Schirmer brought him to me he clasped my hand warmly and said, 'Well, I'll tell you I would have needed you when I would come back again.'

"We quickly became fast friends, and before he returned to America he had my contract to come to New York in 1907.

"One of my stipulations to that agreement was that I should be permitted to bring my own company of French artists to America with me, and this was agreed. When I came over I was accompanied by Hector Dufranne, Charlie Gilly, John Perrier, Gervaille Ralech, Gustav Huberdeau, Felix Vieulle, Charles Dalmores and Maurice Renaud, whom I considered the best support in France.

"Little did I dream of the trouble I was bringing down upon my head when I came to America on this venture."

(To Be Concluded Tomorrow.)

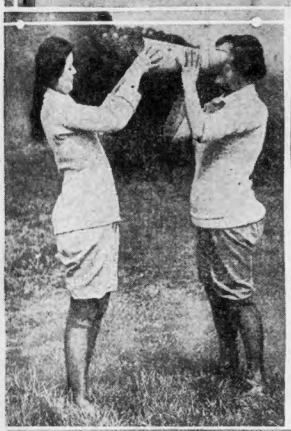
FLORAPHONING. One of the inventions of wartime is the floraphone, which is now utilized extensively for commercial purposes and is giving satisfactory results. It consists of using trees for wireless telephone and telegraph work. Any live tree can serve as the antennae for the wireless phone. One or more nails are driven into the trunk of the tree and a wire connecting the portable wireless or telephone set is wrapped around the nail. It is possible to talk ten miles through space by means of the portable wireless set. Photo at right shows operator winding wire around nail, and at left, talking by means of the trees. (Int.)

TESTIMONY. In the case of Mrs. Mabel Flanagan, above, who seeks to have the divorce granted to her husband, Dr. Frank J. Flanagan, set aside, has been submitted to Chief Justice Aiken. She alleges "pink pajama" episode was framed during first trial.

SONG DOCTOR. Making voices to order is the latest scientific achievement by means of a simple throat treatment. Dancers and even moving picture actresses have taken the treatment and are now moderately competent singers. (W. W.)

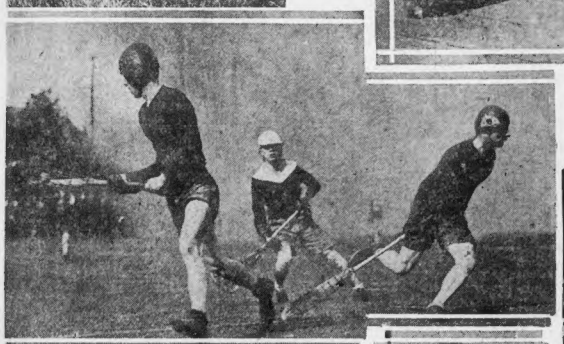
FOR HE'S A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW! Besides exporting toys, clothing and cutlery, England is sending scores of orphaned children to the U. S. for adoption by lonely American mothers. Photo shows little Ray Cox, who has just arrived on these shores. (W. W.)



HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU. Crew captains enjoying a long cool drink after the heart breaking race held at Sudbury Hill, England. These sturdy girls went through a physical grind in the oar dash that would have made their sisters of a decade ago faint to even think about. (W. W.)

THIS LITTLE PIG. Went after his breakfast so enthusiastically that his little brother piggies didn't get anything. The little girl is Margie Van Camp of Brooklyn, N. Y., who became the foster mother of this litter of 16 squealers when their mamma met with an accident—via the butcher's block. She finds that her orphans thrive best on a milk diet. The bottle, of course, has to be filled many times. (Int.)

SPECTATORS. Mrs. W. A. Harriman, New York society woman, watching the judging at the Charity Horse Show at Tuxedo Park, which has just closed. Her pet dog seems to be equally engrossed in the animals. Mrs. Harriman is an excellent judge of horses. (Int.)



THRILLING. Moment in the intercollegiate lacrosse game between Lehigh University and Syracuse at Brooklyn for the championship of the country. Lehigh won after a gruelling fight. The winners were the champions of the Southern division and the losers held first honors in the North. It was the first time that the two stellar teams ever clashed. The player on the left has the ball. (Int.)

BARS AND BATS. Babe Ruth, "King of Swat," doesn't let a little one-day jail term interfere with knocking home runs. Photo shows Ruth signing his confession of guilt. He was charged with speeding. (U. & U.)

HOME AGAIN. Miss Eleanor Anthony, great niece of Susan B. Anthony, the suffrage pioneer, who has returned to Washington after a four months' visit in China. She was an ardent worker in the interest of equal suffrage. Took a prominent part at the unveiling of the suffrage memorial in Washington. (U. & U.)

STARTLING! Was the term passengers on the S. S. Aquitania applied to the smart leather dress worn on the way across by Miss Louise Jackson of Boston, who returns home after a delightful trip on the Continent. (U. & U.)

WE'LL SAY SO! Grand chapeau peau de soie bleu pastel garni autruche naturelle. Which means, in good old U. S., that this beautiful hat of blue facing is trimmed with natural color ostrich feathers. It is one of the latest models, direct from Paris. The French style centre is finding it more difficult to please American women as the hats designed here are equally stylish and cost much less. (U. & U.)

WAIT A MOMENT! This chap isn't a highwayman, although he looks formidable enough to be one. He is wearing a war mask which once belonged to a Prince General of Japan in the 15th century. Is made of iron with white horse hair whiskers. At present on view at Surrey, England. (W. W.)

BIKE A LA MODE! Among the novel nautical crafts which contested at the Paris thermal resort at Lake D'Enghien was this bicycle propelled raft, which attracted more attention than any other conveyance. It proved to be the fastest in the competition and was awarded first prize. It motivated by the large propeller in front, unseen to the eye because of its speed. (W. W.)

SPEED! Experts declare that this is the most perfectly stream-lined airplane in the world, known as the "air motor car," which has just left Croyden with French Air Ministry officials. It seats four travellers in a limousine saloon precisely like that of an expensive touring car. Another can ride "outside" beside the pilot. It has a speed of 100 miles an hour. (Central)

WATER LEAP FROG. The bathing season is now in full swing at nearly all New England resorts and scores of tired workers flock there to enjoy the sea sports and the cooling breezes. Scenes like this are typical of Nantasket, where fun and good cheer are a part of the lazy Summer season. Hundreds of bathers lined the sands there yesterday.

AUSTRIA TO GET NEW START

Genius of Stinnes in Reviving Coal and Iron Fields Will Restore Industry

By NORMAN HAPGOOD, Staff Correspondent of Boston American.

Washington, June 12.—The most striking news that has leaked across the ocean in some time is that Austria is about to be given a start in life by the ability and the will of Herr Hugo Stinnes.

The great blast furnaces of Austria have been lying idle while all Europe needs the product of their work. They have been lying idle because they could not get coke to run them with. Because there were idle the factories that made agricultural machinery were idled in like way. Because there was a scarcity of agricultural machinery in the country the people of [illegible] were bound to starve.

Stinnes noticed a number of things. He noticed that when Germany lost Lorraine she lost two-thirds of her home supply of iron. He noticed that she also lost [illegible] operation with [illegible] France did not. He noticed that she has not yet been admitted to the financial council table. He saw in these sympathetic relations with Germany the path for Austria's safety and her future prosperity.

Stinnes, therefore set about acquiring a coal milling interest in the Alpine and Montain Company of Austria. He thus obtained coal resources on a large scale and enormous iron works, likewise control of the Styrian iron ore fields, better in percentage of iron than the fields of Lorraine.

Stinnes is not through. He is now trying to do the same thing in Hungary that he has already put through in Austria. It is expected that in a few weeks he will have Hungary going also.

All through these countries we shall see factories producing agricultural and [illegible] machinery being turned out, the price of life being fixed in sound currency, one great economic unit [illegible] shown the way, not [illegible] of recovery [illegible] and the stupid features of the peace.

Wed a Prince and Isn't Sorry

New York, June 12.—At least one marriage of an American girl with foreign royalty turned out happily. The authority for this statement is no other than the Princess de Braganza, Duchess of Oporto, formerly Nevada Hayes of Ohio, who arrived here from abroad.

"Anyone who thinks that marriage between an American girl and a foreigner of royal blood can bring only unhappiness is mistaken. My marriage was the happiest in the world."

This American girl is the widow of the Prince of Braganza, the Duke of Oporto, uncle of ex-King Manuel of Portugal and brother of the murdered King Carlos of Portugal.

Associated Clubs in Convention Discuss Extension of Truth Campaign

Atlanta, Ga., June 12.—Prominent merchants and manufacturers, as well as active workers in the truth-in-advertising movement which is fostered by the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, went into conference here today to discuss ways and means for the further extension of this work.

It is growing harder and harder for fakers to buy advertising space in newspapers and other legitimate advertising mediums, because, through the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs, through Better Business Bureaus in thirty-two important cities, and through volunteer local vigilance committees, dishonest advertisers are being exposed and publishers and others, unwilling to forward the interests of such advertisers, are co-operating to free the business of them.

It was shown that every business man of importance in thirty-two cities now having Better Business Bureaus is co-operating, as well as more than 800 advertisers, newspapers and others that are carrying sustaining memberships in the organization and co-operating closely with the work.

SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

By BETTY ALDEN.

The merry month of June runs glitteringly along—to an unusually heavy accompaniment of wedding bells. As I heard one young matron exclaim, "This is the wedding-dinner June ever!" And quite right, for in spite of the fact that quite a number of very important nuptials have already taken place, there are still many more to come. Everyone is interested in the double wedding of the Rogers girls next Saturday, by Mr. Saltonstall and Mr. Maynard, next Wednesday Reginald Foster of Mr. Hub will marry Frances Bear in Washington; the wedding of Agnes Grew to Alexander Wheeler at Waverly Farms takes place the day following; on the 29th of this month Eleonora Coolidge becomes the bride of Charles H. Works at Kings Chapel, and on the same day Dorothy Wells will be married to Lothrop Motley Weld; still another coming nuptial is that of Isabel Coolidge and Dr. Thomas Donald Cunningham on the 16th at Trinity Church. All these, to say nothing of the very important wedding of Miss Curtis to Prince Antaucasene at Kahant, and Miss Topham and Mr. Bellonstalls at All Saints' Church, Brookline.

* * *

I feel quite sure that society folk breathouts will murmur deep signs of relief as soon as this busy month comes to a close, for the long list of fashionable weddings, together with Harvard commencement doings, has caused quite a hectic, if delightful, round of social activities for Madame and Miss Society. Then once more will they go on their pleasant vacationing way—to the mountains, to the shore, and some, to Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Weld of Marlboro street are sailing abroad this month, as well as Mr. and Mrs. J. Brooks Fenno. The Fennos are going to Europe to join their daughter Miriam, who, it will be recalled, has been assisting Miss Anne Morgan's committee in the devastated France region.

* * *

I hear that the largest Harvard Ha Hasty Pudding Club at noon, and a Beck Hall for tea, following the exercises at the Stadium. In fact, garden-ers on Class Day are to be at Prince Cantacuzene will be among the hosts at the Hasty Pudding Club spread. Following the commencement exercises on Thursday, numerous large parties will go down to New London on Friday for the boat races.

I see that Miss Muriel Saltonstall has returned from abroad in time to attend the wedding of her brother Richard to Miss Mary Rogers, which takes place at Topsham next Saturday. In fact, it was quite essential that Muriel return, for she is to be maid of honor for her future sister-in-law. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Saltonstall, who, besides having a town house on Bay State road, are of the New Haven, Me., colony and possess also an estate at Sherborn, though most of the year is spent at Chestnut Hill.

NEED OF WOMEN DOCTORS URGED

More Girl Graduates Should Enter Field of Medicine, Dr. Morton Says

There is an urgent need for many more women physicians.

That is the message to American young women delivered by Dr. Rosalie Slaughter Morton of New York, who attended the Medical Convention here last week.

Dr. Morton urged that young women take up the study of medicine, and declared before the Medical Women's Association that there is a tremendous field for women doctors.

She pointed out that women physicians are doing splendid work in Serbia, Armenia, Turkey and Macedonia. In Serbia, Dr. Morton said, American women physicians are carrying on hospitals at Veles, Strumesta, Prilip and Pristina.

"This is a new era. What we have done as women during the war has demonstrated more than ever what a woman physician can do as her part in alleviating suffering in different parts of the world.

"The wonderful work carried on by Dr. Etta Gray in Serbia shows conclusively what a woman can do in circumstances which are at times trying.

"There are very many women in every part of the United States who may be wondering what profession they will take up. Having graduated from college, they go into some mercantile interest. This is well enough, but I believe among the many young women who are now graduating from colleges and high schools, this year, some of them ought to take under serious consideration the field for women physicians.

WORCESTER ELKS PLAN BIG HOME

Worcester, June 12.—Worcester Lodge of Elks is planning on having one of the most substantial homes in New England. Plans are already started on renovating the Jonas G. Clark estate at No. 29 Elm street, recently purchased for $200,000. The lodge is to make considerable improvement in the property and will spend $95,000 for entire new furnishings for the new home. A two-story addition to the present three-dive-room structure is to be built and will contain a lodge hall and a banquet hall, each having a capacity of 1,000.

R. I. MILK SALE LAW IN TEST CASE

Providence, June 12.—The coming appearance of Walter Lowden of Aquidneck avenue, Middletown, in the District Court, means the beginning of a test in the courts of the State of the validity of the constitution put on the milk law by the Board of Health in Newport. Mr. Lowden was arrested in Newport charged with peddling raw milk without a license from the Board of Health.

40,000 YANKEES NOW IN PARIS

Paris, June 12.—The American tourist rush has reached its height. It is estimated today there are 40,000 Americans here. Contrary to expectations, they are showing less interest in the battlefields than in Paris itself.

REGULATE THE CHILDREN
With Appetizing Cereal Meal

LET your thoughts go back to Childhood and the memories of the dosings we used to get to prevent what we now know as Auto-Intoxication and to keep our bowels regular—

THOSE are disagreeable memories which still linger, but Physicians now agree that Drugs for this purpose are habit-forming, only partially effective, a shock to the delicate little systems, and, if persisted in, cease to be effective at all.

It was this knowledge which prompted a prominent Physician to scientifically work out a combination of delicious, strengthening Cereals, which provide the regulating elements totally lacking in the average food of today.

This Ideal Food Regulator Is Known as

CEREAL MEAL

There is one element which promotes thorough digestion.
Another which lubricates.
Another which stimulates the lower intestine to function thoroughly.

And these combined with selected grains of wholesome strengthening power, successfully build the strength of the whole family, old and young alike, at the same time inducing the thorough evacuation daily which is essential to rid us of the poison of accumulated waste—the most deadly foe to health.

Do not confuse Cereal Meal with medicine—or with any so-called laxative food.

It is a perfect combination of many elements which make it so safe for the little ones—so sure to agree with them—so sure to strengthen them—and so certain to induce naturally, normally and without exception, daily, a complete clearing out of the lower intestine in a pleasant way, with never a need for the dread doses which will ever live in your memory and mine.

Mother Writes of How Cereal Meal Relieved the Serious Condition of Her Baby.

April 11, 1921.

Gentlemen:—

I have been using Cereal Meal for the past four weeks with wonderful results. After having tried all other means to relieve constipation in my baby, my doctor recommended Cereal Meal, and she has had one and sometimes two natural movements daily.

She is now over two years of age, although she is retarded, as she has been sick practically from birth. She never slept well at night until lately.

I have recommended Cereal Meal to several friends with the same excellent results as I have obtained from it.

Yours very truly,
(Mrs.) E. S.,

BASEBALL GAMBLERS GET POLICE PROTECTION, SAYS DREYFUSS

CASH PAID, CHARGES OWNER

Declares Pittsburgh Police Refuse to Act to Curb the Bettors

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 13.—District Attorney Harry Rowand and Superintendent of Police Thomas Carroll are expected to take notice today of the sensational charges made by Barney Dreyfuss of the Pittsburgh National Baseball Club to the effect that, though he hires thirty city policemen to maintain order at the Forbes Field park, yet gambling is being carried on within and without the grandstands and ball park.

The Dreyfuss charges are in part as follows:

"Gamblers, most of the gutter class, although there are others, gamble openly in the ball park. They even make bets outside the door of my own office as well as on the streets surrounding the park.

"I have repeatedly appealed to the police, but get no satisfaction.

"There seems to be some unseen power at work protecting gamblers here. I have found gambling conditions in no city as they exist in Pittsburgh. They seem to act with impunity; plain evidence to me that protection money is being paid to someone 'higher up.'"

VETERANS APPLAUD KNOCK AT DEMPSEY

Asbury Park, June 12.—"I hope to the Lord that Dempsey will get licked," declared Colonel Thomas D. Linden of the Bordentown Military Institute in a patriotic address here.

Colonel Linden, who was addressing the twenty-third annual convention of the New Jersey Department of the United Spanish War Veterans, was the old commander of the Third Battalion, Third Regiment, N. G. N. J., during the Spanish War.

His remarks about the champion were applauded by delegates.

TOMMY REGAN IS SEEKING MATCHES

The following letter explains itself:

"Care Boston American.

"Dear Jack:

"I am anxious to read about the trouble matches that are taking in what looks like attractive matches for right in their own city is a boy who has always proved gentleman and always gives the fans a run for their money.

"I refer to Tommy Regan of East Boston, one of the best little boys in the country. Tommy will make 122 rounds ripside for Abe Friedman, Yvonne Monigal, Terry Martin, or any so-called bantamweight in the country. He will not ask reasonable weight, the same to go to a size where he was those boys. Tommy is willing to go to the limit in securing him, he is ready to step with Al Shubert, Danny Frush or any other boy willing to go 122 pounds. Let any matchmaker that wants a sure enough card to up any of those boys in any bout and under these conditions will get the match he asks.

"Very truly yours,

TIGERS FOLLOW WHITE SOX HERE

Duffys Will Get Plenty of Opposition During Next Few Days

By Nick Fistley.

This threatened to be a more exciting week at Fenway Park than have been the two similar stretches of time just gone into history. Tyrus Cobb and his Tigers drift into our midst for a four-game visit.

The Detroiters are ever popular here, and from all reports the new manager has them acting more like the teams that used to give real battle to the Red Sox than was the case in the last few years of the Jennings regime.

Before that, however, Kid Gleason's youthful Chicago White Sox play a couple of contests, today and tomorrow. The Kid hasn't a championship outfit, but he has a lot of young ball players, who are very earnest about their work!

* * *

The Chisox were likely to be dangerous today, for the reason that Urban Faber was to pitch. The gray-haired flinger is the only shareholder of the Gleason staff that's at all consistent. Dick Kerr, the little southpaw, hasn't found his effectiveness yet, and the youngsters are flighty and uncertain.

Faber, however, is pitching better ball than he has been since his arm was hurt a few years ago, and is quite a consistent winner.

* * *

Bullet Joe Bush was in line to work for the Sox, and incidentally scheduled to win a game. He hasn't been himself on the home pasture yet.

* * *

Manager Gleason isn't worried an, about losing ball games. He figures that he has a lot of young ball players who are getting more real experience this season than they would in several campaigns under other conditions.

"You never heard of a ball player stepping right in and setting the world afire, not even a star. They take a year or two to get the experience, no matter how much ability they have.

"Most of my players are kids, put in because I had to have a team. They're learning this year, and by another year they will be ready to give the best they have. Building a ball club, when you can't buy regular big leaguers, is not a matter of a couple of months.

"A few of the birds I have working now will be pretty good ball players in a season or so.

* * *

Looks as if Heinie Groh has taken it upon himself to test out the power of President Landis. There's no doubt the edict sentencing Heinie to the Reds will meet with opposition from the clubs that were looking for the little third baseman.

The Sox have a solid fortnight remaining in their present home stand, and all efforts are being made now to get the pitching staff whacked into shape. Apart from the box, Manager Duffy is satisfied that the team could stand up in any kind of a race.

Uncertain pitching, however, has taken a lot of confidence and snap out of the veterans, though they try hard enough. But the dash that winning ball clubs possess is sadly lacking at the Fenway, where things are too much on the cut-and-dried order to suit the fans.

WARNS GEORGES TO JACK UP

New York, June 12.—"Carpentier must change his training methods immediately unless he wants to be beaten," declares Spiker Webb, boxing instructor of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, in the current issue of the Courier Des Etats-Unis.

"Last week," writes Webb, "I motored out to Manhasset where Carpentier is preparing for the big fight and then I went to Dempsey's training camp at Atlantic City. My visit to the French boxer's camp has convinced me that Carpentier must change his training methods immediately, get seriously down to work, engage some rough and ready sparring partners and start active preparation for the fight unless he wants to be beaten.

* * *

"Carpentier's training methods are not at all in tune with what the preparations for a fight regarded as the greatest of all time should be. I like Georges; I consider him a remarkable boxer; up to the moment of my visit to Manhasset I considered him without a doubt the only one capable of holding up his head with the champion of the hoavies.

"But here are a few of the things I saw: A couple of fossils whom I learned with surprise to be his sparring partners; a cottage entirely lacking in luxurious appointments where Carpentier lives, and finally a sort of little stable in which is installed the gymnasium, where the man who aspires to be champion heavyweight of the world is training. Then I saw Goldberg, called the best of Georges' sparring partners, who boxed two rounds with Carpentier in my presence.

GOWDY STARS AS BRAVES WIN

Hank Gets Homer With Bases Full in Game at Chicago

Chicago, June 13.—Hank Gowdy plunked a home run into the left field bleachers in the fourth round today with the bases filled and it was well he did, for the Cubs tied the Braves in the ninth but lost out in the tenth. The score was 12 to 9 and it was some contest.

Even with the mighty and timely hitting a bit of luck was needed for the Braves to move over the winning tally. Two hands had expired in the tenth when Nicholson started a grounder straight to Grimes. The ball bounced over his head for a two-base hit, giving the Braves the marker needed to break the tie. Just to make the victory doubly sure Toney Boeckel plunked a homer in the same spot Henrio planted his.

* * *

The game was a nightmare of pinch hitters, pinch runners and substitute pitchers. The only brand of pinchers that did not horn into the lineup was a pinch thicker. Jaws Evers used twenty of his hired hands, while Nappy Mitchell relied on thirteen sterling wielders of the ash and propellers of the sphere, in a manner of speaking.

* * *

Folks came and went so fast that there were three Braves pitchers in the hectic eighth when the Cubs lambasted Pillingim, Braxton and Watson and batted all the way round for six hits and four runs before they could be extinguished.

* * *

Considerable credit of victory should go to Cruise. The Cubs had the bases all peopled in the seventh with two down when John L. Sullivan, a former Brave, dinged a long low liner down the left field foul line. Cruise sprinted and just managed to snare the ball with his finger tips. Three runs would have been unloaded if this drive escaped.

* * *

Each side used four pitchers, while the Cubs employed also a pair of catchers. The mighty Gowdy stuck to the receiving end of his team all through the fray.

* * *

After the Cubs tied the score in the ninth on Deal's double, an out and Vaughn's sacrifice fly, the fans in the left field bleachers grew so excited they hurled pop bottles on to the field, and the game was halted while they were picked up.

The bombardment was not directed at any player and was taken merely as an outburst of enthusiasm.

ATHLETES GAIN HONORS IN STUDIES

Williamstown, June 13.—Athletics and studies appear to go hand in hand, for from the list of honor men in the senior class at Williams College, as recently announced by the faculty, in the group rated "summa cum laude" the name of Howard R. Coan of New York City appears. He has been prominently identified in track and cross country throughout his course at college.

Two other Purple athletes are found under the "cum laude" group. John Crofts of Mount Vernon, captain of the varsity track team, and Hugh Bullock of Denver, Col., the tennis captain, being those thus honored.

PRESS GOLFERS MEET ON LINKS

Boston Players Entertain New Yorkers in Match on Bellevue Links

By Robert E. Harlow.

Twenty-one New York newspaper men stepped off the boat today for the first annual inter-city golf match with Boston newspaper workers.

The match was played at the Belleview Golf Club, Melrose, which kindly consented to allow the course to be abused for the purposes of this match. Up to the present time no clergymen have objected to it.

Boston newspaper men contributed liberally to a fund for the purpose of entertaining the New York brothers. A full report on how the entertainment went will be made later. Nothing was omitted in preparing for this affair. Nothing.

Members of the Worcester Country Club are taking great interest in the State amateur golf championship which is to be held at that course in July. It will be in fine condition for the tournament. A great many improvements have been made and the players will find the links a real test, severe on poor shots but responsive to good ones.

* * *

Well hit shots bring a fine reward at Worcester as is attested by the record scores made there by Willing. Besides a new record round of 68, he has been credited with a 70 and a 71 within a few days. One is playing fine golf, the best in his experience.

The members of the New England Professional Golfers' Association played at the Hartford Golf Club today in an amateur-professional tournament.

There are two open tournaments on the M. G. A. schedule this year. The Springfield tournament, a medal and match play event, starts Wednesday and ends Friday and there will be a medal play tournament at Lexington, Friday and Saturday. On Thursday at Woodland there will be a foursome competition for husbands and wives, the first event of the kind ever played in this district.

The American professional golfers in Britain practice this week for the British open championship at St. Andrews. The only one of the last of the international tests on the other side, links which have been hard on American golf. Soon the Americans, with Duncan, Mitchell, Kirkwood, Macfarlane and others, will be back in United States soil, where the international struggles will be continued.

School Meet

The annual open-air meet of the Arlington grammar school children was held today on the Spy Pond Athletic Field, Arlington. Dr. William T. McCarty, director of athletics in the schools of Arlington, was in charge.

SAUCE AND SASS

By CHARLES E. PARKER, GOIN' FISHIN'

Have you caught yourself a-wishin'
Once again to go a-fishin'
In the pond you knew so well in days gone by?
Do you find yourself a-yearnin'
Just to hear the mill wheel turnin'?
Well, you've got a fellow yearner—I'm that guy.

Often 'tis when I've been thinkin'
Of that pond, my eyes start blinkin'
Like a softy, and I call myself a loon—
Boyhood memories come throngin'
And I cannot down their longin',
So I guess I'll have to go there pretty soon.

But you will not find me buyin'
Fancy rods and lines, or tryin'
To use reels and feathered fly hooks and such truck—
For I'll get my bait by diggin'
And I'll make a simple riggin'
Like I used to—Seems it always brought me luck;

And I'll fish and fish, 'till fishin'
Answers ev'ry wish I'm wishin'
'Cept a few that can't be answered any more,
Then I'll come back here a-smilin'
With a rhyme or two beguilin'
That may cause a few to laugh, or sigh, or roar.

Although the Atlantic Ocean is very handy by to bring training camps neither Dempsey nor Carpentier is accepting its cooling invitation. They probably think someone would say they were practicing diving for a purpose.

* * *

Those who are worrying over Carpentier's ability to perform at his best before a crowd should remember that during the war he performed before a much larger gathering than that which will assemble at Jersey City, and a considerable portion of that war audience was extremely hostile.

* * *

Of course, things at Jersey City will be much different. In France, for instance, Carp did a nose dive and promptly thereafter received a decoration, while over here he'd probably receive the decoration before he did the nose dive—Dempsey would pin it on him.

* * *

They say that at Dempsey strenuously opposes the French custom of kissing among men, but that he is perfectly willing that Carp should kiss the canvas should he feel so disposed.

* * *

Samuel Pass said he didn't know Attel at all, and how it will be just like someone to say that Pass was pasted a pass to the "Black Box" games.

* * *

Those close to him say they expect to see Heinie Groh accostumed to Cincinnati again.

THAT'S A POINT.

Now the golfers are returning from the links we know the way.

"The numerical percentage was against us," they will say. But last Summer, in our "open" did it bother Teddy Ray!

CHESS MASTERS ON MILLION-DOLLAR PIER

Atlantic City, N. J., June 12.—H. B. SUBURBAN LEAGUE TEAMS ARE IDLE

Teams in the Suburban League will remain idle till the holiday, when they play the last game of the scheduled twenty-one. Disturbing among the players has been on the wane owing to the long schedule played. It is rumored that at the next meeting of the directors a fourteen-game schedule will be adopted.

COLUMBIA FOOTBALL CAMP PICKED OUT

New York, June 12.—Definite announcement that Columbia will establish a football camp in New Jersey next Fall has been made by H. W. Watt, graduate manager of athletics. The camp will be situated at Camp Vail, Little River, N. J., where barracks and a large practice field have been secured for Coach (Nick) Bloe and White football warfare.

EXPERT TELLS TAD BROADWAY LIFE HAS INJURED DEMPSEY

BIG PURSES AND NIGHT PARTIES LOWER CHAMPION'S STOCK

By TAD.

New York, June 13.—The following is exactly what a prominent sporting man told this writer today. This man has been in the sporting game for years, knew Dempsey before he was a champion and knows a conditioned and a "burnt out" athlete when he sees one.

"Bill Brennan saved Jack Dempsey's title. Dempsey didn't hold him up. Don't let them tell you that. Jack Dempsey was through that night and it's lucky for him that Carpentier wasn't in the ring instead of the slow-thinking, heavy-footed Brennan. I saw Jack before he won his title, before he had money, and he was a rough fellow.

"The night he fought Brennan he was a wreck. I saw him coming down the aisle to the ring that night and he was green, not pale, but green. That stage stuff, those big purses, those parties—that's what set that fellow back.

"He was just a shell. Didn't you notice them giving him strychnine tablets between rounds and rubbing him around his heart? Everyone around me did. He was not trying himself out with Brennan. He was doing the best he could. He just barely beat his man that night, and I'll tell you he got the worst of his life. He tried training for a fight on Broadway. No one has succeeded at that yet.

"That Brennan fight scared Dempsey into real work. He's training now the way he should have done for Brennan.

"I don't think he's right yet. It sets a fellow back quite a lot—that brighter light training.

"The luckiest thing that Kearns ever did was to make that match with Brennan. It just showed how far back Dempsey had gone."

Dempsey Promises to Win as Quickly as Possible

By JACK DEMPSEY.
Heavyweight Champion of the World.
(Copyright, 1921, by King Feature Service.)

Atlantic City, N. J., June 13.—Right here and now I want to make this promise.

I'm going into the ring on July 2 for the sole purpose of finishing Georges Carpentier in the fastest time that it's humanly possible for me to accomplish the trick.

I pledge my honor with that promise. Rumors have come to me and to Jack Kearns, my manager, that I am likely to go into the ring with the Frenchman and stall around for a few rounds "for the movies." It has been pointed out that if the fight ended in the first round the moving pictures would not go over big as a selling proposition, whereas, if the fight lasted several fast rounds they'd be worth a lot of money.

* * *

On fight day I will have no interest in those pictures. Kearns already has considered a scheme whereby we are taking a fair sum of money for our share in the pictures. Whether they sell big or sell little makes no difference to us.

* * *

The thought in the minds of some that because there'll be no official decision on this fight and I can't lose the title except on a foul or by being knocked out, has created the idea that maybe we'll stall through the fight so as to get a return match. Nothing was ever farther from the mars than that belief.

I rate Carpentier as a dangerous foeman. Any opponent who is fast and clever and who can hit with knockout force, is a menace to me until he is on the floor and out. I am not going to take any chances with that Frenchman. I'm out to win from him the first minute that I can. Nothing would make me happier than to win with a few well-placed punches in the first round—and without ever having hit myself.

* * *

I do not for a minute lose sight of the fact that I am defending the title against a foreign foe. The title is held now in America—and it rightly belongs in this country. If I am to be defeated it is my fondest wish that an American will do the trick. Yet, it should be borne in mind that the chances are that no American fighter would get a crack at the title for years and years and years.

The Frenchman has declared that no matter what happens to him in this fight he plans to retire immediately afterwards. Should he win the championship it would retire with him. The direct line of title, therefore, would be broken, for if Carpentier never was defeated—if he were champion—no other could gain unquestioned right to the crown.

* * *

All that is well fixed in my mind. I know what would happen if the Frenchman should win. I accept, from the statement of Carpentier, that he wouldn't fight again. And the championship would go to Europe to stay there.

* * *

When I climb into that ring I want the American sporting public to know that I'm fighting to keep the title in America; that I'm in there trying to win and that as long as there's an ounce of energy in my body I'll keep on fighting—to win.

* * *

What a sudden drop that Lynn-Englishman has taken. Preparations that were under way for a post season game have been dropped. The brand of ball now being played by Coach Sexton's tribe gives either Peabody or Lynn Classical the chance to come home a winner.

* * *

Peabody took advantage of their weaker opponent when they took Marblehead into camp. At the same time Coach Joyce was taking the starch out of Sexton's team at Little River, which makes the Tanners and Lynn English tied for first place with Classical High going on high in second position.

* * *

Three games are yet to be played, which will settle the championship one way or the other.

* * *

Lynn Classical plays the three weakest teams in the league—namely, Beverly, Chelsea and Gloucester. By winning all three and a loss of two by either Peabody or English, Coach Joyce and his band can slip through a winner by a narrow margin.

* * *

The Lynn crews are making the best of their time preparing for Bunker Hill Day, when the local men on the Lynn harbor for their second annual race. The Fraser cup held by Classical High is due for a change of custodian, according to Gene Hickey, coach of Lynn English.

* * *

Plans are now under way to have the Cambridge Latin team, champs of the Suburban League, meet Dorchester High, champ of the Boston City Schools League, at Braves Field Friday.

* * *

Funds are at their lowest point in the Canuh treasury, which accounts for the post season game. Players of the team, despite the long schedule, are anxious to see the next year's organization properly fitted out.

SCHOOLBOY ATHLETICS

By Fred C. Lane

Andover, playing the part of the under dog, turned on its rival, Exeter, and did a good job to the overconfident Exonians. This game closed the schoolboy activities at both institutions for the season. For Andover it has been one never to be forgotten.

* * *

Andover's victory at the Harvard interscholastic meet was on par with its victory on the diamond Saturday. Candidates of the Exeter football team that witnessed that game have their minds all set to even matters in the fall.

* * *

Malden High, although not a winner of the league race, has shown more fight in its last ten games than any team in the league. Coach Jack McDonald had a difficult task at the season's opening, but since then has built up a scrappy team that has given all considerable worry.

* * *

Lew Sapperstein, who has pitched the bulk of the games played to date, has done a job worthy of recognition. The infield has been a bit unsteady all season, which accounts for the standing of the Malden team. To offset this loss, Coach McDonald has developed a fast an outfield as there is in the league.

* * *

Woburn High supporters are pleasing a reception to the baseball team that has brought a championship to their town. Arlington High, a serious contender all season, was given a trimming recently which eliminates the biggest obstacle in their path to the flag.

* * *

Peabody took advantage of their weaker opponent when they took Marblehead into camp. At the same time Coach Joyce was taking the starch out of Sexton's team at Little River, which makes the Tanners and Lynn English tied for first place with Classical High going on high in second position.

Johnny Clinton, New England lightweight champion, will toss punches in the general direction of Franklin School of Buffalo in another ten-round bout. Schoell is one of the few men who have ever beaten Clinton. When this pair met in this city last Winter, Schoell bested the New Englander in the fight. It was a close, hard fight and there was considerable dispute as to merits of the decision. Consequently there is sure to be plenty of stirring moments crowded into the whirl tomorrow night.

* * *

Shaver O'Brien will have Frank Tillo as an opponent in the third ten-rounder. This tussle is also a repeat. When this pair met recently, O'Brien won. Shaver was mighty fortunate to go the distance, however, for he was having outpointed Tillo for nine frames he even almost fattened in the tenth session when he got in the way of a right-hand swing.

Paul Doyle and Nate Siegal will be happy, Spike Hennessey of Waltham and Jack Mansfield of Lawrence will mingle in as right-round whirl.

* * *

Abe Friedman, New England bantamweight champion, will probably get the next crack at Young Montreal. As Friedman has already bested the Providence miller, it would seem appropriate that Monty should meet the title holder before entering a ring with Joe Lynch.

* * *

Paul Doyle and Nate Siegal will probably be signed to meet in a ten-round frolic at Woonsocket in the near future. Doyle has experienced all sorts of trouble uncorking matches since he bested K. O. Loughlin.

JAMIESON AND LARSEN MEET

Clinton vs. Schoell and O'Brien vs. Tillo Also on Armory A. A. Card

By Jack Conway

Boxing will be back in normal this week with the Armory A. A. staging a show at Mechanics Building tomorrow night. Thirty-six rounds of bang-up fighting is billed.

Wolf Larsen, who won the national amateur boxing championship last Winter, will oppose Ted Jamieson of Milwaukee in one of the ten-round contests. As a "simon-pure," Larsen was a sensation. He knocked all of his opponents for goals with the same precision that Jack Dempsey displays when socking sparring partners.

Larsen's first professional fight was against Leo Houck and proved a sensational contest. This writer was among those who were fortunate enough to see the mill. There were more thrills in the first three frames than one sees in 100 ball games when Babe Ruth acting the principal role. The men just stood toe to toe and swapped punches. Larsen scored a knockdown and appeared to be on the way to victory when he weakened and Jamieson scored a knockdown and then piled up enough points to entitle him to the award.

* * *

It was the first time Larsen had ever been called upon to box ten rounds. This was why he tired after the third. He has trained differently for tomorrow night's encounter and may be called upon to go the full distance at a torrid clip. As Jamieson is determined to repeat his initial win, the fans should witness plenty of lively quarreling.

Kearns Wants Referee to Watch Descamps

By Tad

Atlantic City, N. J., June 13.—"Descamps, I see, has rigged up barbed wire barricades against the public and won his battle," piped Jack Kearns at the Traymore Hotel, donning the well-known feed bag.

"He didn't want the public to crash the gate. His troubles are over. I'd like barbed wire put around Carpentier's corner the day of the big fight, to keep Descamps from crashing into the ring if things go wrong for him.

"He gave me an idea with that barbed wire. You know he hurdled the ropes many a time over there in Europe when his man was being licked and I don't want it done this time. He got away with it in the Gunboat Smith fight and a couple of others, but if the referees were square shooters they'd have disqualified Carpentier. A man's handler has no right in the ring until a decision is given.

COULD WIN FOUR YEARS.

"Descamps would have broken all records for pole vaulting if he'd been in the Olympic games. He's Europe's foremost hurdler, take it from me. I hear that they have hurdles up there at Manhasset for Carpentier. In my heart I really think that Descamps uses them.

"I want the referee in this fight to abide by the rules and bar hurdling the same as foul blows. I never jumped on a ring set to claim a foul for Dempsey. Jack won his title by fighting, and if he loses it he'll lose it fighting. We've never claimed foul yet, and when I do I'll be outside the ropes when I call.

"I wouldn't make a complaint except that I know this fellow Descamps is my reputation. He has jumped into that ring often in the past and might do it again on July 2. Like that guy Patrick Henry said, 'I know no way of judging of the future but by the past.'

"If Dempsey intentionally fouls Carpentier I'm willing to lose, but I don't want any rope hurdling while the referee is making his decision.

WANTS TO WIN FIGHTING.

"Jack will fight a fair and square battle, and if he loses will not complain. He doesn't want to win on a foul, and will not claim one unless it is intentional and obvious to everyone at the ringside. Dempsey knows that some day he'll get his, and he's ready to take it.

"When I first got Jack boxing he made a remark to me that I'll never forget. I had him at my mother's house over in Oakland, and we were retreat to Frisco that night to fill in a date with Gunboat Smith. It was Jack's big fight, and at the supper table my mother leaned over and said to me, 'Johnny, I don't want you to let Jack get hurt to-night. You won't, will you?'

"I promised her that if the Gunboat beat Jack up that I'd toss in the towel. Dempsey didn't say a word. He kept putting away the green corn and didn't even look up.

"When we got the boat for Frisco some hours later we were on the upper deck looking at the lights of Frisco. Jack nudged me and said, 'Listen, Jack, I heard what you said to your mother to-night. You meant well, but it don't go. If Smith knocks me down don't throw up that sponge, will you? On the level I fight lots better after I've been down a couple of times.'

"I almost laughed in his face, but I didn't. I thought right then that this must be some fighter. I'd never seen him hit hard in my life, but I knew then that he had the spirit.

SMITH LANDED A PEACH.

"Say, if my mother could have seen the punch that Smith landed on Jack's chin in the first round of that fight I think she would have fainted. I thought he was done for myself. Smith pulled one right from his heels and it caught Dempsey full on the chin. He sort of swayed like a flagpole. The whole house roared 'There he goes!'

"He didn't fall, though. Smith missed the next punch, and Jack sort of revived. When he did come to he gave the Gunner a spanking that he'll never forget. That made Dempsey for me. Right after that I got him on with Morris and all the big fellows. I knew that he could take it and come back strong. He hasn't failed me yet.

"We've never had occasion to claim foul except with Carl Morris at Buffalo, and that was deliberate. Just give us a referee who can count ten and who knows the rules. That will do. The referee needn't be the strictest in the world. As long as the men mean well, there will be no boller; but when deliberate fouls occur I want a decision."

FOUR IN 35-MILE PACED RACE

Madonna, Wiley, Chapman and Bedell Scheduled at Revere Oval

Sensational racing should be on tap at the Revere Cycle Track tonight when Vincent Madonna, George Wiley, George Chapman and Menus Bedell meet in a thirty-five-mile motor paced race. This event, scheduled for last Saturday, was postponed because of the slippery track. So much is at stake in this race that Manager Butler deemed it wiser to call a halt and wait for suitable conditions.

There is much speculation over the outcome of the race. Friends of Chapman and Wiley believe the brilliant Madonna is due for a licking, but the latter will have plenty of supporters. It would not be surprising if the veteran Bedell upset the dope tonight.

KRAMER VICTOR OVER SPENCER

Veteran Bike Rider Proves He Is in Best of Form Again

Newark, June 13.—Frank Kramer, the East Orange flash of speed, defeated Willie Spencer of Toronto in two straight heats of a one-mile match race at the velodrome in Newark. Kramer displayed that he has returned to form by the brilliant manner in which he rode. He won the first heat by riding from in front and took the second from the rear.

Kramer set such a dizzy pace in the initial heat that Spencer could not come around him, while in the second heat he rode around Spencer and just nipped him at the tape.

Reggie McNamara, the gritty Australian, won two races. McNamara licked Peter Van Kempen, the Holland bike star, in a ten-mile paced race. Van Kempen was unfortunate in puncturing a tire a quarter of a lap from the finish and could not battle McNamara to the tape.

FILM STARS PICK CARPENTIER

Majority With Frenchman, Though Arbuckle Strings Along With Heavier Man

By Universal Service.

Los Angeles, June 13.—Why shouldn't the film world be agog with excitement over the Dempsey-Carpentier fight?

The victor, unquestionably, will become a film star. And no one wants to bet against a man who may play in the same picture in a few months.

Very delicate situation, that.

With this in view, a canvass of the local firmament becomes interesting. Those who have come out for "celebs" have to say on the subject:

MABEL NORMAND—"Carpentier, of course. What's a few more pounds, and a heavier opponent? I'll see more than a hundred reels with Heavyweight Arbuckle? Tickle him, Georges, tickle him!"

BETTY BLYTHE—"Every woman favors the rapier as against the mace, the medieval knight as against the gentlemen from the cave. I shall place the ace!"

ANTONIO MORENO—"Carpentier would make a wonderful bull fighter. But Jack isn't a bull by a long shot. He's a smart boy. Yet there's something about that Frenchman—I'm giving no odds!"

RUEY DE REMER—"I'm for Georges —I've never won a bet yet!"

COLLEEN MOORE—"Jack Dempsey is the winner. I mean in the fight. But, Oh! Isn't Georges handsome?"

LOUIS FAZANDA—"Dempsey will win. They say the Frenchman is fast on his feet, but he can't get far on account of the ropes."

BETTY COMPSON—"Now, as a leading man, I'd prefer—but it isn't a beauty contest, is it?"

BESSIE LOVE—"Briefly, but emphatically, leave it to Georges."

JAMES KIRKWOOD—"I think the histrionic laurels will be taken by Dempsey on July 2, but I certainly have a lot of regard for the speed of the Frenchman."

ROSCOE ARBUCKLE—"Always bet on the heaviest man, sir. Matter of loyalty with me, sir."

MORE GIRL CLUB MEETS ARE PLANNED

The success of the New England Y. W. C. A. athletic championships staged at the Stadium last week is expected to lead to the arrangement of other athletic meets for girls and young women of this section.

Many persons prominent in the handling of school, college and club track and field athletics were present at the 1st meet and the majority of their number expressed themselves in favor of similar contests for the school and club girls of Boston and vicinity.

Secretary Manning announces that the best of the local "simon-pure" boxers have entered the tournament. As a result there is sure to be plenty of lively mailing.

"Confident Boob" Believes Carpentier Will Win

By JACK CONWAY.

Letters, especially those dealing with the Dempsey-Carpentier bout, are always interesting. Here is one we received in our mail today:

"I cannot see why Carpentier has not a chance to win over Dempsey. Although I have not seen either of the fighters in action, I am picking Carpentier to shade Dempsey. As the bout is a no-decision affair, it is up to Carpentier to knock the champion out to win. Such a feat is not easy when battling a warrior like Dempsey. By the day of the bout, though, I, a confident "boob," believe the Frenchman will be an even betting proposition. And when the wise boys give you a look in you are entitled to some consideration.

Medbury's Column

Some men know how to conduct themselves at a social event and they know how to act at an afternoon tea, but most of them don't know how to get along at a public dance hall.

You go up to a powder puff and ask her if you may have the next dance, and she's colder than an Eskimo mother-in-law.

Then some other guy will crash up to her and say: "I got this struggle with you, ain't I?" Then she smiles and clings tighter to him than a poet to a doughnut.

After the dance he takes her over to the settee along the wall, and if there's room for both of them on it he lets her sit down, too.

If she gets tired of standing he goes around and tries to find her a crutch.

If the polite guy gets up and offers her his seat her escort punches him in the nose for being sarcastic.

It costs you two and a half cents to go on the dance floor and get crushed for three minutes. You can get crushed all day in the subway for a nickel.

Some of the girls who go to these palaces are wonderful toe dancers. They dance on everybody's toes except their own.

They stand on your feet and save their own.

A dame will stand on one of your leather dog houses for an hour and you have to wait for somebody to come along and introduce you to her so that you can ask her to step off.

A bird with a wooden stepper is the only bird who can enjoy himself at one of these terpsichorean terminals. But even then the chances are that some finnee ripper would stand on his healthy foot.

In the public parks there are signs "Keep Off the Grass." Why not wear little placards on our shoes, "Keep Off My Feet."

Some interloper steps all over your shins and you don't know whether he's careless or working for some shoe parlor.

He may be like the thug who used to knock your teeth out and then give you a card to his brother, who was a dentist.

The only difference between the thug and the dentist was that the thug robbed you without a license.

Dempsey Good Luck Tokens Weigh Ton

Atlantic City, N. J., June 13.—If Jack Dempsey carries all of the tokens of good luck sent him into the ring when he faces Carpentier, he will weigh about one ton. The champion receives from 50 to 300 letters daily, each containing some sort of a trinket which, the sender declares, will bring him good luck if worn inside the belt. Good-luck pennies of ancient date, rabbits' feet, medals and miniature dolls are some of the things which the postman dumps into the champion's front parlor every morning.

BLAIR PLANS TO DEFEND ACTION

It is reported about Cambridge that Austin Blair, the recently disciplined Harvard catcher, will present a letter to Harvard baseball authorities, at their meeting this evening in which he will defend his recent action in quitting the team just before the start of the recent Harvard-Pennsylvania baseball game.

Whether this will cause a rescinding of the recent action taken on his case is awaited with keen interest by the Harvard student body, some of whom think the taking away of the varsity letter won by Blair last year a punishment out of proportion to his alleged offence.

Watch the June Moon

IN Summer, when the sun runs high, the moon, as it nears the full phase, runs low. The Winter moons are brighter, but the Summer moons are easier to watch. The June moon falls on the 20th in Sagitarius, at the edge of the Milky Way.

Robert W. Chambers' Famous Story THE STREETS OF ASCALON Illustrated by Charles Dana Gibson

The Story of a Beautiful Girl and the Man for Whom She Made a Great Sacrifice.

By Robert W. Chambers,
Whose Novels Have Won Him International Fame.

"MADAME concedes that the poor Harlequin has won his wager?"

"Yes, I do—and you don't appear to be particularly humble, either."

"Madame insists on paying?" he inquired suavely.

"Yes, of course I do!" she said, uneasily. "I promised you an hour out of my life. Am I to pay it now?"

"You pay by the minute—one minute a day for sixty days. I am going to take the first minute now. Perhaps I may ask for the other fifty-nine also."

"How?"

"Shall I show you how?"

"Very well."

"A magic pass or two, first," he said gaily, crooking one spangled knee and spinning around. Then he whipped out his lathe-sword, held it above his head, coolly passed a glittering arm around her waist and looked down into her flushed face.

"You will have to count out the sixty seconds," he said. "I shall be otherwise occupied, and I can't trust myself to do two things at once."

In a Corner

"What are you about to do? Sink through a trap door with me?"

"I am about to salute you with the magic kiss. After that you'll be my Columbine forever."

"That is not included in the bet, is it?" she asked in real consternation.

"I may do as I please with my hour, may I not?"

"Was it the bet that you were to be at liberty to—to kiss me?"

"I control absolutely an hour out of your life, do I not? I may do it as I please. You had better count out sixty seconds."

She looked down, biting her lip, and touched one hand against her cheeks, alternately, as though to cool them with the snowy contact.

He waited in silence for her reply.

"Very well," she said resolutely. "If you elect to use the first minute of your hour as frivolously as that I must submit, I suppose."

And she began to count aloud, rapidly: "One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine—"

Her face was averted; he could see the tip of one small ear all aflame. Presently she ventured a swift glance around at him and saw that he was laughing.

"Ten, eleven, twelve," she counted nervously, still watching him; "thirteen, fourteen, fifteen—" panic threatened her; she doubled both hands in the effort of self-control and timed her counting as though the rapid beating of the tempo could hasten her immunity —"sixteen, seventeen, eighteen, nineteen, twenty, one, two, three—"

"Play fair!" he exclaimed.

"I am trying to, but I say it that way up to ten and then say thirty!"

"Oh, certainly. I've still half a minute. You'd better hurry! I may begin at any moment."

"Five, six—seven, eight—m-m-m—thirty!" she cried, and the swift numbers fled from her lips fairly stumbling over one another, tumbling the sequence of hurrying numerals into one breathless gasp of "Forty!"

His arm slid away from her waist, he stepped backward and stood, watching her, one finger crooked, supporting his chin, the ironical smile hovering ever on his lips.

"Fifty!" she counted excitedly, her hands beating time to the counting; "fifty-one—two—three —four—m-m-m—sixty"—and she whirled around to face him with an impulsively triumphant gesture which terminated in a swift curtsey, arms flung wide and head bent.

"Viola!" she said breathlessly. "I've paid my bet! Am I not a good sport, Harlequin? Own that I am and I will forgive your outrageous impudence!"

"You are a most excellent sport, madame!" he conceded, grinning.

Relief from the tension colored her cheeks; she laughed bewitchingly and looked at him, exultant, unafraid.

I frightened you well with my desperate counting, didn't I? You completely forgot to do—anything, didn't you? Voyons! Admit it!"

"You completely terrorized me," he admitted.

"Besides," she said, "while I was so busily counting the seconds aloud you couldn't very well have kissed me, could you? That was strategy. You couldn't have managed it, could you?"

An Abject Idiot

"Not very easily."

"I really did nonplus you, didn't I?" she insisted, aware of his amusement.

"Oh, entirely," he said. "I became an abject idiot."

She stood breathing more evenly now, the pretty color coming and going in her cheeks. Considering him, looking alternately at his masked eyes and at his expressive lips where a kind of silent and inward mirth still flickered, a sudden doubt assailed her. And presently, with a dainty shrug, she turned and glanced down through the gilt lattice toward the floor below.

"I suppose," she said, tauntingly, "you hope I'll believe that you refrained from kissing me out of some belated consideration for decency. But I know perfectly well that I perplexed you and confused you and intimidated you."

"This is, of course, the true solution of my motives in not kissing you."

She turned inward him:

"What motive?"

"My motive for not kissing you. My only motive was consideration for you, and for the sacred convention of Saint Grundy."

"I believe," she said stormfully, "you are really trying to make me love with her. Quarren is taking a nap and does not see her. Mrs. Wycherly gives a masked ball and Quarren, as a Harlequin, hunts out Streisa and, both masked, she not knowing him, they have a battle of wits, in which she promises him an hour out of her life if he will guess who she is. To her great surprise he tells her her name and then claims the hour she has promised to do with as he will. She is aghast, but consents, and at the end of sixty minutes he informs her that the time is up and that he has won. She admits defeat and awaits his demands.

Strelsa Leeds, the Heroine of the Romance.

What Has Happened So Far in "The Streets of Ascalon"

DICK QUARREN, a talented young man, lives in bachelor quarters with friends in apartments known as the Irish Legation. When the story opens Quarren's friends are discussing the return of one of his checks. They assert that society has got a hold on him and is making a nobody out of him. Westguard, who has accepted the check, calls Quarren's attention to it. The latter takes it light-heartedly, saying that he forgot to make a deposit. Mrs. Wycherly, a cousin of Westguard's, brings Strelsa Leeds, a fascinating young widow of scarcely twenty, to call. The men all fall in

A Spirited and Swiftly Moving Romance of Hearts and High Society, by the Greatest Living Master of Fiction

"Am I—have I—in this ridiculous performance" she asked, appalled.

"Fifty-nine times," he laughed, doubling one spangled leg under the other and whirling on his toe till he resembled a kaleidoscope tetotum. Then he drew his sword, cut right and left, slapped it back into its sheath, and bowed his head, swinging low, hand over his heart.

"Don't look so troubled, madame," he said. "I release you from your debt. You need never pay me what you owe me."

Up went her small head, fiercely, under its flashing hair.

"Thank you. I pay my debts!" she said crisply.

"You decline to accept your release?"

"Yes. I do!—from you!"

"You'll see this thing through! If it takes all winter!"

"Of course"; trying to smile, and not succeeding.

He touched her arm and pointed across the hall, perfumed air to the gilded clock on high:

"You have risen it through. It is now one minute to midnight. We have been here exactly one hour, lacking a minute, since our bet was on. . . . And I've wanted to kiss you all the while."

Confused, she looked at the clock under its elaborate azure and ormolu foliations, then turned toward him, still uncertain of her luminosity.

"Do you mean that you have really used the hour as you saw fit?" she asked. "Have I done my part honestly?—Like a good sportsman? Have I really?"

He bowed, laughingly:

"I cheerfully concede it. You are a good sport."

"And—all that time"—she began with that note—"you—"

"I had my chances—silly of them."

"And didn't take them?"

"Only wanted to—but didn't."

"You think that I"——

"A woman never forgets a man who has kissed her. I took the rather hopeless chance that you might remember me without that. But it's a fine shot. I expect that you'll forget me."

"Do you want me to remember you?" Strelsa asked curiously.

"Yes. But you won't," said Quarren.

Too Pretty

"How do you know?"

"I know—from the expression of your mouth, perhaps. You are too pretty, too popular to remember a poor Harlequin."

"But you never have seen my face! Have you?"

"No."

"Then why do you continually say that I am pretty?"

"I can divine what you are from—from your hands. You are too pretty, Harlequin, you are funny. Do you realize it?"

She laughed again and the slight flush came back into her cheeks.

"But you're nice, anyway. . . . Perhaps if you had seen me face you might have let me go unmolested all the quicker. . . . Masks cover horrible surprises. . . . And then again, if you had seen it perhaps you might never have let me go at all!" she added, ruefully.

In the gilded balcony opposite the orchestra had now ceased playing; the whirl and noise of the dancers filled the immense momentary quiet. Then soft calmes from the great clock sounded midnight amid cries of "Unmask! masks off, everybody!"

The Harlequin turned and drew the black lizard from his face bent low and saluted her hand, and she, responding gaily with a curtsey, looked up into the features of an utter stranger.

She stood silent a moment, the surprised smile stamped on her lips; then, in her turn, she slipped the mask from her eyes.

"Voila! I've won!" she said.

After a moment he said, half to himself:

"I knew well enough that you were too unusual. But I hadn't any idea—any——"

"That I was not disappointed to me, montsieur?"

"No."

The Wild Goose

By Gouverneur Morris

This romance has been made into a stirring motion picture by Cosmopolitan Production under the masterly direction of Albert Capellani.

Story Up to Date

Francis Manners, an architect and artist, is doing some special work in California while his beautiful wife, Diana, and their small girl, Tam, are in the East. He tells a letter from Diana and wonders what she is doing in town, as they had agreed to keep Tam in the country during his absence. He decides to go back, meets an old hunter on the train who relates the legend of the wild goose, which, after losing its mate, never mates again. On his return home, Frank finds Diana is in love with Ogden Fenn. Frank tells her he will give her grounds for a divorce. Frank begins to smoke and drink to excess. He notifies Diana to have him watched as he intends soon to act. Her detectives follow him to Mrs. Herriot's house. The latter tells Frank the story of her life. He is sorry for what he has done. Diana calls on him. He tells her she has never been a good wife to him.

"OF course, I would. I loved Newport and Palm Beach and all the hard riding between places, but most of all I loved to see you having a good time. But I knew it was wrong for us to live like that—oh, sometimes it was all right. But it was not all right when we didn't have the money and had to go in hock for our fun.

"And when I objected you turned cool as ever. You said I was making more money every year, why worry? I was making more money every year, but how? By doing work—oh, it was as good as I could do, I guess, but it wasn't the kind of work that paved the way for better work later on. I was in no form to live period. I simply had been experimenting and strolling instead of swelling around pretending that I had arrived.

"Then you, Diana, shouldn't have made the mistake of giving the best that was in you to other things. You should have put it all into the work—not to me, to the work. People have to live for something.

"We should have lived for the strength that enabled us to live at all. But you didn't. Oh, I am to blame, too," he interrupted a protest that Diana was about to make. "We didn't go where the work wanted to go, or live as the work demanded at the right time.

"That is our failure; that and not listening to the voices of the little children who wanted to be born, the little children that the work had a right to want. That is where we have failed and why. Of course, you have failed in love with another man. We hadn't the sweetness of sacrifices offered in common to fall back on."

No Use Talking

With the point of view that was characteristic of her Diana said:

"Then I don't see any use in rubbing it in. It can't be helped now."

"Of course it can't—now," said Manners with a slight show of impatience. "And I am not talking for our benefit, but for yours. You see your welfare, even your life, is rapidly slipping out of control, touches very closely. You have not been a good wife to me, bl, dear, you know that, don't you?"

"Oh, I suppose I do. But I didn't come to be scolded. I came because I knew you'd feel terribly, and to say that I am sorry, and to thank you."

"But he would not be diverted from his intention to say what was on his mind.

"If I let myself think about Fenn," he said, "I see red and I want to see him punished. He has no excuse. But I say this to myself: Diana isn't mixed up with him. He is a man you couldn't possibly either like or dislike. If you happened to know him you certainly wouldn't take the trouble to cross the street to speak with him, so I try to have the decency of my thoughts and calculations. To punish him would punish you. I don't want you punished."

A Peculiar Plea

"I want you to get the most that is possible out of your life. There is only one way, Diana. Do right. Give this fellow a square deal. Don't think that having him a whole lot for a while is the best you can do. Steel yourself against the night when his passion is still aflame and yours has flickered out. That is one of the great test moments which decides whether a wife is going to be a success or not.

"There are other test moments—when he lays before her some matter in which his whole interest is involved. Try to be interested. When you know that you are spending too much be the first one to say so and be the one to suggest the ways and means of retrenchment. Don't take that hellish duty to him. * * *"

"Frank," said Diana a little coldly, for she hated any mention of money, "you don't appear to think that we'll be able to work these things out for ourselves?"

"Not unless you go to him in the sackcloth and ashes of true penitence. Not until you see in what way you have been selfish and profligate both of lives and material. Not unless, when you speak the marriage vows in that beautiful and moving voice of yours you have some idea what they mean and intend to keep their promises.

"When you married me you didn't know what you were saying. So I exonerate you, or, rather, I forgive you. But if you had known you would simply have been perjuring yourself. This time you will have some idea what you are saying. Don't let it be a perjury. If you promise to love, honor and obey Fenn till death part you, for God's sake do so!

"You have said to me time and again, 'But how can I love you if I don't?' Bosh! Bubble! Rot! Of course that don't free a woman from responsibility. If I had fallen out of love with you, Diana, you would never have known it from me. So help me God! And if you had suspected, I would have lied and denied until hell froze over. You will do well if you take to your new marriage the code of honor which I brought you in ours."

He was silent. And neither of them spoke for a long time. Then Manners drew close to his wife, and though his fingers hovered near her shoulder, he did not actually touch her.

No More Unkind Words.

"I hope, dear," he said, "that I shall never speak another unkind word to you, or think any more unkind thoughts. I have done what you wished me to do, or what it seemed exigent for me to do. You will soon be free. We must not meet often, or the law might suspect us of connivance.

"It is better that we should not meet, dear, for then, you would have your divorce upon unimpeachable grounds. I have not merely furnished evidence. I have broken my marriage vows; smashed down all the ideals that I had of life and conduct. If I have wronged you and sinned against you in other ways I am paying for it now."

She went to the door of the well-remembered room, not with the proud look of a free woman, but with the expression of a child that has been whipped. At the door she turned. He had followed her closely.

"Frank," she said to a queer little voice, "would you like to kiss me good-by?"

She lifted her face, her lips slightly parted.

"That's all right, Di," he said, "that's all right."

He did not kiss her; though it looked for a moment as if he was going to.

One of the greatest victories of the mind over itself we often see about us and give it little thought. It is when a young girl, thoughtless and pleasure-loving, marries, and cheerfully settles down to a life of self-denial and sacrificing, ever putting her home and her children's needs before her own.

Miss Alexa Stirling, the American woman golf champion, who is to try for the British championship at Turnberry, Ayrshire, on the 30th, told this story of a certain professional player who won a competition in the course of which he made a record number of remarkable long drives.

Immediately afterwards he was surrounded by a regular mob of golf enthusiasts, each anxiously asking what ball he had played with.

"Well," replied the pro, with an eye to the future and to the ball manufacturer, "I haven't quite decided yet!"

Her Own Way

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

"ARE we expected to drink a whole bottle apiece?" Helen asked of Sidney Lake, who took a chair next to hers.

"Indeed we are!" the host exclaimed. "Are you afraid? If we can get it. Don't you like beer?"

"I never tasted it before," Helen confessed. It is rather bitter, isn't it?"

"Yes, but one soon learns to like it," he said. "See! I envy you, Miss Gorman!"

"Why?"

"Because you are having the fun of doing things for the first time. It is refreshing to watch you."

Resentment.

That was the kind of comment that Tom Andrews had made of and to her that evening in the restaurant. She resented it vaguely. She must be careful not to betray how new she was.

So she gulped down the bitter beverage, and took a cigarette as a matter of course. She could not drink more than one glass of beer, but nobody commented on the fact. She laughed at all the stories and jokes—whether she understood them or not. Some of them she found quite pointedly amusing. Others were so slangy or subtle that she missed the points entirely. But she smiled, nevertheless.

As the beer disappeared, the hilarity increased. And the noise kept pace with the hilarity.

At last, Luther Willard went into the bedroom and returned a minute later wearing a pink negligee of Elizabeth's. Over one ear he had perched one of her hats.

"Start the music!" he commanded. "Andrews and I are going to give an Apache dance."

He was greeted by a roar of cheers as Andrews and Andrews he dragged him out into the centre of the room. Here the pair danced wildly to a melody strummed by Ruth Hunt and Sidney Lake.

When Willard and Andrews had "done a turn," chairs were moved out of the way, rugs in dining-room and living-room were lifted, and everybody paired off to dance, while those who did not do so stood against the wall, beating time with feet and hands and whistling in tune with the music.

Complaints.

The clock on the living-room mantel chimed a single stroke. Helen glanced at it. The hands pointed to 1:30.

At that instant there was a ring at the front door. Andrews hastened to answer it.

There was a sudden cessation of merriment as a man's voice was heard. Andrews replied in a low tone; then, shutting the door, returned to the company.

"That was the tenant from downstairs," he informed the hostess. "He insists that the noise here must cease. He and his wife are so inconsiderate as to want to sleep. If they are not allowed to he will report the nuisance to the Board of Health, he says."

Helen smothered a shocked exclamation. But Elizabeth only laughed.

"All right," she said. "I suppose we will have to stop dancing. I am glad the old bird did not come up and say earlier in the evening. It would have interfered with our fun."

"Whew!" Dr. Bob pretended to mop his brow. "I sure was scared stiff! I was afraid that the house was being pulled. Once," he added in a low tone to me, "I was born when it was pulled. But that is another story."

Elizabeth Mayo and Helen Gorman did not wash the dishes that night after their guests' departure.

"Let them wait until morning!" Elizabeth protested when her friend started to carry soiled plates and glasses into the kitchen. "Tomorrow will be time enough. Don't be so fearfully neat!"

She spoke almost fretfully. She was tired after the evening's merriment, and wanted to go to bed. Noting this, Helen did not argue. She was so weary herself that she longed for rest.

In twenty minutes the little flat was silent and its occupants slumbering heavily.

It was half o'clock in the morning, and still dark, when the telephone rang. Helen started to a sitting posture.

"Hark!" she exclaimed. "What is that?"

Elizabeth struggled out of bed. "It's the telephone, of course," she explained. "What did you suppose it was?"

She stumbled across the room into the hall, more asleep than awake.

Five minutes later she returned to her room and switched on the light.

"What's the matter?" Helen demanded.

"Enough's the matter," was the grumbling rejoinder. "A case."

"Oh—and you're going!" Helen asked.

"Yes, I've got to. I kicked a bit, but they say there is no one else, and he's too big a man for me to refuse. He just about took my head off on the 'phone. What if I could not go on tomorrow in-

Girls, Don't Wash Your Face

Use Liska cold cream instead (you have never used anything like it). Just try it once, and you will never be without it. Soap and water has a tendency to make the skin rough, and does not clean the skin as thoroughly as Liska cold cream. To prove it make this test: Wash your face with cold water, dry thoroughly, then apply Liska cold cream; massage it well into the skin, then wipe off the superfluous cream with a soft white cloth; examine the cloth and see how much dirt has accumulated. Liska cold cream cleanses, softens and beautifies the skin. For sunburn or after a dusty auto trip there is nothing like it. It's fine after shaving, too. Let bubby or brother try it. Just compare Liska cold cream with any other you have used, and you will need no further argument to convince you that it's the best. It's put up in tubes, the only sanitary way. Try it tonight. You will be delighted. Sold at toilet counters everywhere.—Advertisement.

"I hate to leave you now," Helen said regretfully.

She felt suddenly very lonely, and spoke without thinking. "It's going to be awfully forlorn here without you."

Elizabeth gave a short laugh, but there was no note of mirth in it.

"My dear," she said sarcastically, "when you have lived as long as I have you will know that money does not come to people who sit around and do nothing. I have played for a week. Now I have to start in again and earn my living."

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

Many things look as if they were moving the wrong way.

Lots of dividends have been passed, a hundred or more stocks broke to new low quotations for the year during last week's attacks by professional bear operators.

* * *

Call money rates went higher. Foreign exchange rates have tumbled. Average commodity prices still are moving downwards. Unemployment increased slightly last month. Business is still the rule in many industries. Our foreign trade is shrinking. A less favorable wheat report was issued last week. Cotton crop conditions are not wholly inspiring.

A "strike vote" has been ordered by the leaders of the railway employes whose wages are to be reduced. Price cutting wars are breaking out in certain important industries. The financial community was perturbed over certain threatened banking troubles which had to be patched up by heroic methods. The Department of Commerce issued a rather depressing survey of international conditions. And pessimism has been rampant.

* * *

Admittedly, there has not yet developed that degree of improvement which basic conditions should have inspired by this time. Nation's financial and industrial leaders have acted, for the most part, as if they were quite content to let things drift as they have been drifting. There has been no energetic, concerted, comprehensive movement to hasten revival of activity and employment.

Bankers have continued to charge practically war-time prices for money. Corporation directors have stopped or reduced dividends without apparently always stopping to take into account the effect upon the general situation. And the so-called "money power" has not done anything effective to check the depredations of the daring, the reckless, the gamblers who are raiding security quotations.

* * *

Yet, notwithstanding all the recent unsettling incidents and acute pessimism, an analysis of the situation justifies expectations of distinct betterment, provided that the majority of those who are at the helm grasp the necessity for bestirring themselves to prevent our army of unemployed becoming larger and larger.

As it is, there have not been wanting significant and encouraging developments.

* * *

Did you notice reports that the U. S. Rubber Company, the largest rubber company in the world, has begun to lay in stocks of crude rubber at the less than cost of production prices now ruling?

The Western Electric Company is understood to have placed heavy orders for copper. The Steel Trust Union was recently reported to have contracted for 10,000,000 pounds of the same metal. The Pacific Gas & Electric Co., of San Francisco has just taken a similar amount, and has contracted for a vastly larger amount at the very low prices now quoted.

* * *

Very powerful interests in the oil industry have raised many millions of capital and invested it in the purchase of immense quantities of crude oil to be stored until prices, now almost the lowest ever quoted, recover—as everyone in the industry in confident oil prices will recover.

Certain capitalists identified with other manufacturing industries have likewise had contracts placed for large amounts of low priced raw materials for future requirements.

If the facts could be ascertained, it would doubtless be found that wealthy men have made heavy investments in securities during the period when bearishness has been running riot, for fortunes are made in investments by courageously buying a thing at such a time as this, when very high income returns can be obtained, and holding on until the security market has advanced substantially. No matter how pessimistic any man of affairs may be at this moment, he is willing to admit that a decisive recovery in security quotations is bound to come sooner or later.

* * *

In other words, the longest-headed and the longest-pursed interests have absolute confidence that the whole situation will undergo transformation by and by. Consequently they are acting on the axiom: "The time to buy is when everyone wants to sell."

My own opinion still is that if those who run things will only handle the situation with business statesmanship, there is no adequate reason why betterment should not make its appearance very shortly, leading to pronounced improvement after the proverbial "Summer dullness" has passed.

* * *

There is justification for expecting lower Federal Reserve discount rates; lower rates by banks for desirable commercial borrowers; the establishment of important machinery for financing both agricultural and industrial exports; better railroad earnings; readjustment of railway and certain other wages without precipitating grave disturbances; fairly prompt reductions in prices for steel and other products which are still regarded as unduly high; increased consumption all along the line as prices become more attractive to the public; a decrease in the number of commercial failures; improved conditions; and buying power throughout our vast grain growing territory, as a result of higher prices for grain and lower labor and other production costs; some further clearing away of an upward movement in attractive securities.

STEELS FALL AT THE OPENING

Sugars Continue to Slump; Low Prices for 1921 and This Century

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at noon, the lowest level of the morning being reached in the second hour. Rapid continued to lead the decline and sugars were next in the downward movement. Foreigners lowered ranged from fractions to about five points.

Issues to recede the most were Mexican Petroleum, Fullman, Punta Alegre, Industrial Alcohol, Haskell & Barker, Crucible, Baldwin Locomotive, Bethlehem B. Trading was active, first hour transactions approximating 600,000 shares. Call money opened at 6 per cent. Foreign exchange was steady at the start, with demand sterling down half a cent at $3.72½. Later in the first hour it was up to $3.73¼.

HAD A WEAK START.

The market was weak at the opening, a number of issues selling at new low on first sales and a few at the lowest prices recorded in this country. Sugar and steel issues led the decline. The former were affected particularly by the passing of the lows for this or several years were Cuban American, Cuba Cane, Reed Sugar, American Sugar, Crucible, Republic Steel, Bethlehem, Baldwin, Corn Products, Chesapeake & Ohio, Northern Pacific, Southern Railway preferred, Mexican Petroleum, Linseed Co., and Middle States Oil. Tire and motor issues had the best support and rallies as a rule did not recede much. At the end of an hour prices were above the lowest, but the improvement was not in general sense and the list was heavy in most departments. In trading circles it was noted that nothing that the main recoup for the recessional was the business situation.

SENTIMENT IS BETTER.

Although last week was a disastrous period for security holders, at its close it could be said that Wall Street sentiment in general is better. Given that the country is now passing through the worst stage of the war aftermath and laying a foundation for good times. Liquidation need be completed in every line before there can be a revival of factory and store activity. Many have already realized yet apparently by some interests, which persist in backing the market which is keeping the world to a lower price level. But bidness cannot climb out of the slough until it gets its feet upon bedrock.

CANOPIC ALIENS ARE LANDED

61 Immigrants Who Escaped Will Be Deported When Captured

Commissioner of Immigration Skeffington announced today that the examination of the 1,000 or more Italian and Portuguese immigrants detained at Deer Island, following their arrival on the White Star liner Canopic, was completed.

Those of the immigrants whose papers were satisfactory were landed at Commonwealth Pier, where special trains were awaiting to transport all who were bound for other parts of the country.

A large number of the Italians are prospective residents of Boston, and these were met at the pier by relatives and friends from this city.

Commissioner Skeffington said that the identities of the 61 missing immigrants, who disappeared during the transfer from the Canopic to Deer Island Saturday, would not be known until the checking up of the passenger list was completed.

He added that the nearest relative or a friend of each of the immigrants was known, and steps would be taken immediately to locate the missing. In all probability they will be deported. While the White Star Company is liable to a fine of $100 for each.

If it is found necessary to detain any of the immigrants today they will be taken to the immigration station at East Boston.

16 DRUNKS TAKEN IN EAST BOSTON

Sixteen arrests for drunkenness were made by the police and Court officers between Saturday evening and Sunday night. Twelve were arraigned by the probation officer and the East Boston Court today placed on file the charges against three and suspended sentence of one.

Fined for Assaulting Girl

Fontana Salpatore of No. 372 Commercial street, North End, was fined $50 in South Boston court today for assaulting a fourteen-year-old girl.

News of Motion Picture World

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

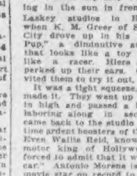
WALTER HIERS is praying daily that Roscoe Arbuckle will suddenly lose about a hundred pounds off his weight. Then Hiers will be the fattest man in the movies. On the other hand, Monte Blue is very thin. They make a great pair and are often seen together.

The other day they were basking in the sun in front of the Lasky studios in Hollywood when K. M. Greer of Salt Lake City drove up in his "Packard Pup," a diminutive automobile that looks like a toy but goes like a racer. Hiers and Blue perked up their ears. Greer invited them to try it out.

It was a tight squeeze but they made it. They went up Vine Hill to high and passed a large car laboring along in second, and came back to the studio in record time ardent boosters of the "Pup." Even Wallie Reid, known as the motor king of Hollywood, was forced to admit that the "some car." Antonio Moreno is the first movie star on record to take the details seriously enough to invest in one.

Walter Hiers and Monte Blue take a spin in the "Packard Pup" and promptly become the "Pup's" best boosters.

"THE FOUR HORSEMEN."



REX INGRAM

USUALLY one view of a film is enough,—once too much, but on occasion a picture comes along that has enough to it to make one sit through a second showing.

But very rare is the film that can be seen again and again and still hold one enthralled.

The first time one sees the Metro production he is swept along by the vividness of the direction and by the action of the story. The second time it is seen more quietly, with a keener appreciation of the work on the film. The third time one can watch more closely the individualities of the players and their splendid acting.

Rex Ingram has worked a masterpiece with the episodes in which the "Four Horsemen" themselves ride the "Desert Figure. The scenes done in red, showing the blood of the beast, and the excitement when the horsemen are released and sent off to ravage the earth are stupendous. They have been designed by a master hand, and worked out by a master mind. Ingram, who has been a sculptor, has surely brought the artistic talents into the film world with him.

He has, too, understood the depth of the meaning of the symbolism of the "apocalyptic beast" and the horsemen. Through the medium of the Russian, Tchernoff he brings out the connecting link with those who are affected by the beast, but not aware of it. The battle scenes with the dim shapes of the horsemen galloping along above the ground are breath-taking in their intensity. Seldom has this film been equalled, we hope it often may be.

MARTHA MANSFIELD IN VAUDEVILLE.

MARTHA MANSFIELD

WHEN motion picture work slacks up the film stars can always fill in their vacations with vaudeville engagements. They are great drawing cards as any bill, a fact which more than one producer and vaudeville magnate has learned.

The newest recruit to the two-a-day is Marilyn Mansfield, the Selznick leading lady, who is appearing behind the footlights in a one-act comedy with Creighton Wilbur, one time movie star, and later stage manager and playwright. Mr. Wilbur has several plays written which are scheduled for production on Broadway during the coming year, two by George Broadhurst and one by Al Woods.

CHAPLIN COMEDY NEARLY FINISHED.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN expects to finish work on "Vanity Fair," his new comedy, within a few days. "Vanity Fair" will be "something different" with a vengeance, for the action takes place, supposedly, in Palm Beach, with gorgeous masked balls and brilliant costumes featured instead of the usual tenements and slums.

Chaplin, furthermore, will be seen in "regular" clothes as well as his famous tramp outfit. Chaplin has two more films to make for First National before he starts on his independent production, to be released through United Artists. He will probably start his own film in October.

MOVIE CONTEST BEAUTY ENGAGED

HELEN LEE WORTHING

HELEN LEE WORTHING, chosen two years ago by a group of judges as Mary Pickford's successor, Griffith Thomas and Howard Chrisler, and Cecil DeMille as one of the most beautiful girls in the United States, has left the movie world for the footlights. She has been signed up to appear in the next edition of the Ziegfeld Follies.

Miss Worthing was a Brooklyn girl living at No. 973 Beacon street. She went to a Tremont street photographer in 1919, and the latter was so impressed with her pictures that he sent them to a motion picture magazine which was running a beauty contest. Miss Worthing, with three other girls, was chosen as a winner and given an opportunity to go into the movies.

CIRCUS ARRIVES IN TOWN

Great White Tops Pitched in Readiness for Week's Performances

The circus—Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey combined shows—will occupy the limelight in Boston this week. Beginning today there will be two performances daily at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m.

This circus is even larger than when here last Spring, and it now requires thirty tons of varying sizes to accommodate the itinerant organization. The first of these to be erected this morning were the kitchen and dining tents.

There will be no street parade, this circus having reached a size where the stimulation seemed desirable, when all the factors of late arrival, long hauls to the show grounds, human consideration for horses, animals and humans with the circus were taken into account.

All energies are now devoted to selling the circus city ready and the proper presentation of the performances, which this year are upon a more immense scale than ever. This is due in part to the acquirement abroad last Winter of the finest trained wild animal acts the European circuses could offer; included in the list are seven Bengal and Sumatran tigers; five Nubian lions; nine Polar bears and five leopards. Adolph Hass, renowned horse trainer, and his thirty-six Barbary stallions are another notable new feature.

A few of the high spots on the program, in addition to the trained wild animal stunts include Lillian Leitzel, the agile aerialist; the Australian ape men, the Davenports, the Clarkonians and Poodle Hilton, trained geese, pigeons, bears, pigs, elephants, dogs, seals and what not.

The zoo has been enlarged and is a thing to interest lovers of natural history.

The performances are given under a spread of canvas capable of sheltering 15,000 people.

Mrs. Elisabeth Hill, fifty-one years old of No. 72 Cottage street, Newton, sustained injuries to her left hip and head when she fell while descending to the stairs at the Boylston street station. She was taken to the Relief Hospital.

Asking Father Made Easy if Suitor Has Wine Cellar

RUTH ROLLINS.

CHARLES PURCELL.

Positively a new twist to the prohibition tangle is the situation in "The Right Girl," by which Charles Purcell, as the hero gains the consent of Tom Lewis, the father, to his marriage to the right girl, Ruth Rollins.

Tom Lewis is probably the best performer of ribulous old gentlemen on the American stage. He objects strenuously to Purcell as a son-in-law, but he needs something to drink frightfully. Purcell presents him with the key of his wine cellar. The old man regards the key, a small one, suspiciously and says:

"I hope the size of the key is no indication of the size of th' cellar."

He finds it isn't. He spends a half hour alone in the place and returns mellow to announce that Purcell has been given some very good recommendations by gentlemen named Wilson, Haigh, McKinley and John Barleycorn, and he may marry the girl if death, injuries or gambling or a property loss of nearly $1,000,000, it was estimated here today.

19 ARE CAUGHT IN NEWBURYPORT RAID

Newburyport, June 12.—Although several managed to escape by leaping from second-story windows during a raid by police and the Diamond Cottage in the rear of Central avenue, Chief Congdon and six patrolmen placed nineteen under arrest, charged with being present where gaming was going on.

LIGHTNING STRIKES TANK, SIX KILLED

Salt Lake City, June 12. — The bursting of a five million gallon gasoline tank in this city after being struck by lightning caused six Walker and he may marry the girl if all to your suit, take him down cellar, provided you have anything there worth the walk.

Four Pictures to Make Young Men Think

Which Would You Rather Be, Gorilla, Dempsey, Carpentier or Voltaire?

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

The four pictures on this page tell you what the Boston American thinks about the coming prize fight, and what young men that want to amount to anything in this world OUGHT to think about it.

We show you here a gorilla, two prize fighters, and one of Carpentier's most distinguished countrymen, the great Voltaire, that no man could frighten, and that any prize fighter could very easily "lick."

A rhinoceros could beat that gorilla, rip him up with his horn and trample his body into the dirt.

The gorilla locked up in a room with Dempsey could kill him in a few seconds, tearing his arms from their sockets, breaking his neck with one twist of a powerful hand.

Dempsey, according to the "experts," will be able easily to beat Carpentier—although it isn't sure, for intelligence plays its part even in prize fighting.

Carpentier, of course, with the greatest ease, could beat such a man as old Voltaire. He could strangle him in half a second, knock him senseless with a blow.

Yet Voltaire represents the type, the energy, the MENTAL COURAGE that lifts and pushes the world upward.

The others represent what is low, base, worthless, mere bragging, brutal physical strength.

Exercise your muscles, imitate the gorilla and the two next to him, JUST ENOUGH TO KEEP IN GOOD HEALTH.

But sit down NOW and study the shape of old Voltaire's head. See how nearly it approaches a perfect circle. See the splendid development of imagination at the top, of thought in front, of powerful mental energy at the back, the energy and courage that drove him on for more than eighty years, constantly working and conquering, and that gave him immortal glory.

Then make up your mind that developing the thinking machinery and deepening the convolutions inside of your skull is more worth while than getting a lump on your upper arm, or planning to do with your right fist that which could be done much better by the hind leg of a mule.

MENTAL fighting counts, PHYSICAL fighting belongs to the rhinoceros and the gorilla.

Sims Should Be Discharged

Another Reprimand Would Mean Nothing to Him

If it is the intention of the United States Government to punish Admiral Sims for his misconduct, they will not attempt merely to give him a public reprimand. He has already received a public reprimand in the most severe language that could be framed for the same conduct. That reprimand was administered by Taft as President, by the then Secretary of Navy George von L. Meyer, and we repeat that it was for exactly the same offensive language uttered in England.

Sims continued to entertain the same offensive atttitude and Secretary of the Navy Daniels, of the Wilson administration, felt obliged to warn him that though he permitted him to go to England as the American naval representative, because the English liked him, yet that he must be careful not to allow his pro-English sentiments to make him forget that he was an American naval officer. Notwithstanding this warning, his conduct during the war as our naval representative was so pro-English that Secretary Daniels publicly declared that our American naval officers found it utterly impossible to get their wishes carried out by Sims unless their recommendations were approved by the British naval staff.

To reprimand Sims again is not to punish him at all, for it will mean to Sims merely another compliment from English sources, and, therefore, will be a mark of honor rather than of shame.

He is soon to be retired by limitation of age, and it is known that he proposes to spend most of his remaining years in Great Britain on a pension. Shall he be allowed to spend American money in Great Britain, sneering at Americans? We submit that he should be dishonorably discharged, and deprived of his pension. Then, if the Englishmen love to hear him sneer at his own country, let them pay for it.

Justice for Soldiers at Last?

Let's Hope It Is True

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Congress, it is said, has worked out a compensation plan for the soldiers, and really means what it says this time. Welcome news if true. A dollar a day for service at home, $1.25 for service abroad, special rights in public lands, insurance, vocational training, etc., are features of the bill.

It will cost the country more than five thousand millions, which makes some taxpayers shiver—especially those that made money in the war.

But a nation that could afford to spend FIFTY THOUSAND MILLIONS for war can afford 10 per cent. of that for men that fought, quickly ended war. That quick end saved the taxpayers at least fifty billions.

YOUR FUTURE

When you were living in that small town or on the farm you were told of the big wages which you would be able to earn in the city, and you imagine that it would be possible for you to go to the city and in ten years lay aside a good-sized bank account.

Have you done it?

Probably not.

Would not you have been better off had you remained on the farm or in the little town?

If you have had your wages reduced or you fear you may lose your job, it is likely you are thinking about going back home.

You are having a hard time to persuade yourself to do so because you are pretty well wedded to certain kinds of amusement which you can get in the city, but which you miss in the back-home life.

Are you going to let such foolishness control your future?

It is about time you got down to the realities and tried to think of getting something ahead in a permanent fashion rather than to put your present comfort and enjoyment first.

Show that you have grown up.

Each of These Can Conquer

Gorilla—He could tear Dempsey to pieces in thirty seconds.

Dempsey—He may beat Carpentier in thirty seconds. Or may NOT.

Carpentier—He could easily, with one blow, knock unconscious the man to the right of him.

Old Voltaire—He couldn't fight any of them, but he COULD and did fight injustice and cruelty. And no man, no King could FRIGHTEN him.

Wit and Wisdom

When we put our obligations behind us they cast long shadows before.

A scandalmonger is a thief who steals our time in which to rob another of his honor.

Every burglar is for disarmament—of others.

Friendship and love have a language of their own.

Life passes while we reflect, but life escapes if we do not.

Democracy was born of an aristocracy of minds.

A liar, like a lost traveler in a forest of falsehood, strays in a circle and arrives nowhere.

Progress

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

LET there be many windows to your soul,
That all the glory of the universe
May beautify it. Not the narrow pane
Of one poor creed can catch the radiant rays
That shine from countless sources. Tear away
The blinds of superstition; let the light
Pour through fair windows broad as Truth itself
And high as God.

Why should the spirit peer
Through some priest-curtained orifice, and grope
Along dim corridors of doubt, when all
The splendor from unfathomed seas of space
Might bathe it with the golden waves of Love?
Sweep up the debris of decaying faiths;
Sweep down the cobwebs of worn-out beliefs,
And throw your soul wide open to the light
Of Reason and of Knowledge. Tune your ear
To all the wordless music of the stars
And to the voice of Nature, and your heart
Shall turn to truth and goodness, as the plant
Turns to the sun. A thousand unseen hands
Reach down to help you to their peace-crowned heights,
And all the forces of the firmament
Shall fortify your strength. Be not afraid
To thrust aside half-truths and grasp the whole.

Knowledge of Inner Life

By Dr. Charles Fleischer.

Copyright, 1921, by Premier Syndicate, Inc.

HOW well acquainted are you with the innermost you?

Each acquaintance is necessary if you are really to respect yourself and others.

They tell a story of Benjamin Disraeli, when he was at the dizzy height of his brilliant career as Britain's Prime Minister. In the midst of an admiring group, discussing religion (though they foolishly say that it is impolitic—it certainly is dangerous—to discuss politics or religion), Disraeli asserted that all sensible men have one religion. When they pressed nearer to ask what that was, the dizzy-ite answered that a sensible man never tells!

That tale came to mind—and it may or may not record a real incident, but in any case is deeply, essentially true—on a certain Good Friday morning, when the writer happened to read Kipling's not very familiar verse, called "Prayer."

It holds a good and needed lesson for all the week and all the year.

"My brother kneels, so saith Kabir, to stone and brass in heathen-wise, but in my brother's voice I hear my own unanswered agonies. His god is as his fates assign, his prayer is all the world's—and mine."

Not Trying to Lessen

It is common jest, with a serious thought at the heart of it, which says in friendly fashion: Orthodoxy is my doxy, heterodoxy is the other fellow's. You know, of course, that orthodoxy literally means true or correct opinion and heterodoxy other opinion or teaching.

It will be ages beyond our time before all the people of the earth will have one God.

Or at least before they will recognize Him as one, knowing that their different names are, indeed, only so many different "names" for the same sense of relationship between man and his Maker.

Have we not all one Father?

No, no! Please believe that the writer is not trying to lessen any one's loyalty to his own particular faith, nor even to make light of cherished differences of doctrine, nor even to suggest that it matters not what we think or feel, accept or say regarding ultimates.

One dares not be so presumptuous or—by implication even—so intolerant.

Merely he is giving his equivalent of Disraeli's cleverism: All sensible men have one religion. And he is trying to say in other, prosier words what Kipling has sung with fine sympathy in this poem, which is here cited.

Indeed, the spirit of democracy moves one to voice this plea as a democratic appeal for mutual insight and mutual respect.

My brother kneels, so it seems, to stone and brass. Really he does not. The stone and brass are only visible symbols of that invisible power to which he addresses himself. Come closer, but not too close, and see! The inner shrine of his heart is open. Now listen!

. . . . "In my brother's voice I hear my own unanswered agonies."

Men as Brothers

Surely, as true religionists, we know the human orthodoxy of which our democracy is the latest revelation.

It may be trite, but it has become newly true that men are brothers the world over, sharing the same human nature and the same human deeds, the same wish to love and be loved, the same yearning for established kinship with the Eternal.

His god is as his fates assign, his prayer is all the world's—and mine!

Prayer is the unlocking of the inner shrine for reverent approach to the holy of holies, which indwells each of us.

Remember, the childhood love jingle? If you love me as I love you,

That is the one religion of all sensible men, the religion of
